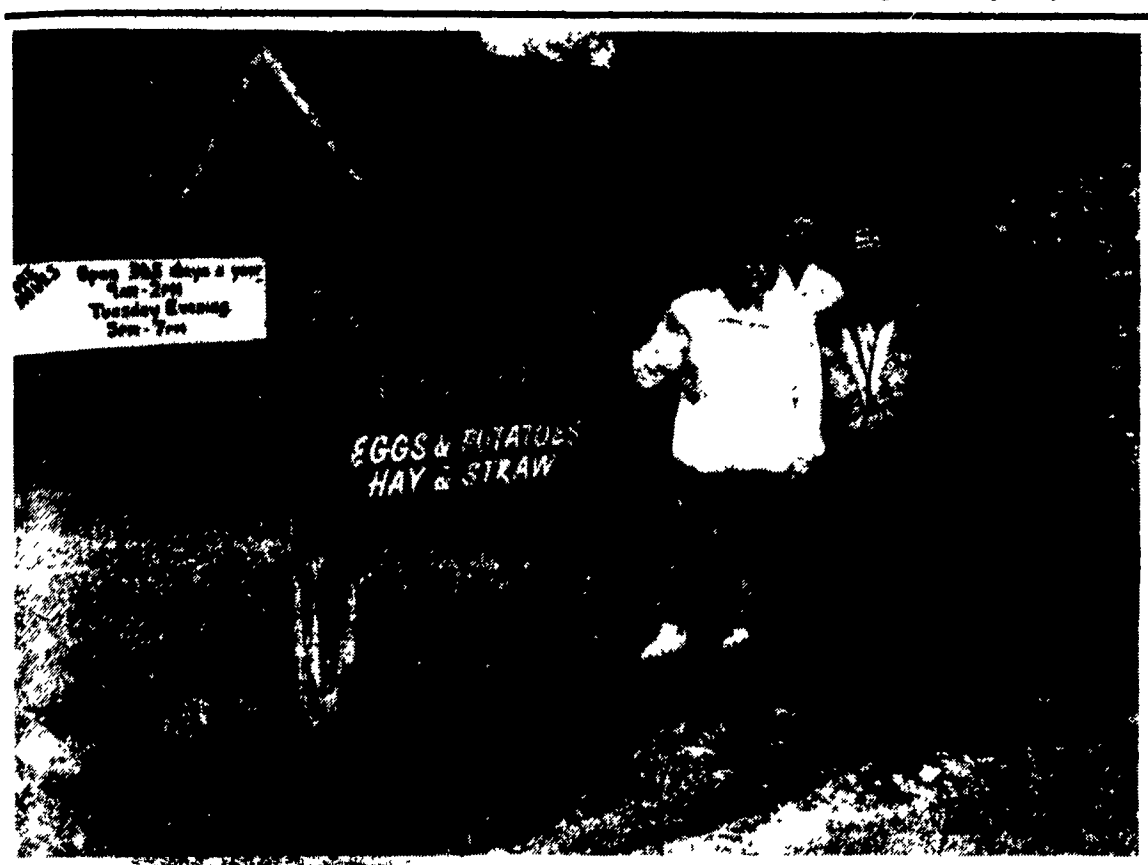
Lancaster Farming

Vol. 38 No. 29 | Four Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, May 29, 1993 | 80¢ Per Copy | $19.75 Per Year



The Fink family manages 1,000 acres of Heidel Hollow Farm near Germansville, in the rolling hills of northwestern Lehigh County. The farm took its name from Heidelberg Township and the natural hollow in the hills where the farmstead sits. Award-Winning Alfalfa Producer Knows Importance Of Growing Conditions

ANDY ANDREWS

GERMANSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — David Fink remembers last year's wet, cool summer, and how much it threatened his quality alfalfa growing on the family's Heidel Hollow Farm.

Six solid weeks, he said, of wet weather lasted from July 4 until August 10, 1992. But despite dealing with a loss of some 40 acres because of a related fungus disease, rhizoctonia, he was still able to get in a good three cuttings.

The farm depends on good weather conditions, the right planting times, a good seed, and quality soil preparations to continue its bread-and-butter business — hay making. For his farm's efforts in producing and promoting the "queen of forages," and for serving the industry, Fink was recently honored with the Producer Award for the Northeast region from the Certified Alfalfa Seed Council at this year's alfalfa awards program in Appleton, Wis.

Stands fair

So far, this year, of the 600 acres of hay he grows (250 acres of pure alfalfa, 250 acres of an alfalfa/timothy hay mix, and 100 acres of pure timothy), the stands look fair. "That's all I can say," he told Lancaster Farming during a recent interview at his farm. "It only looks fair, it doesn't look great.

"We need rain," he said, which he soon obtained as a storm system came through the southeastern portion of the state. "This rain was timely — we needed this."

Last year, the best forage tested was about 20 percent protein with a relative feed value of 160 — not

Proposed Seasonal Farm Labor Regulations Threaten Family Farms

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers could face more difficulties hiring help if proposed laws and regulations for farm labor and seasonal farm labor are approved, according to a lobbyist for the Pennsylvania Farmers Association.

Karl Brown is PFA director of agricultural employers programs, and, in addition to helping members understand labor laws, he works in Harrisburg to lobby for PFA's position on labor issues.

On Thursday, Brown said that PFA members need to be aware of two efforts now at the state level which would change farm labor laws and regulations. He said the effect would potentially drive many typical farm family operations out of business or make it prohibitively expensive to hire anyone to help run the farm.

The most pending problem comes from the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER), which has responsibility for ensuring certain standards for the physical conditions of seasonal farm labor camps.

Brown said that, because of a 1988 court settlement stipulation that DER signed, new regulations now proposed by DER would open up the legal definition of a seasonal farm labor camp to include many family farms where housing is included as part of the compensation or housing is provided.

Brown said the proposed regulations, which were recently approved by the Environmental Quality Board, are mandated through a court agreement.

In 1984, on behalf of mushroom workers, a group sued DER claiming that it wasn't correctly implementing the provisions of the Seasonal Farm Labor Act. DER has had this responsibility since the 1978, when the act was passed.

In 1988, to settle the matter, DER agreed in court documents to create stricter regulations to ensure proper facilities for seasonal farm laborers.

Office Closed Monday

Dairy Issue Next Week

Lancaster Farming's annual dairy issue will be in your hands next week. Again, we have special stories and also messages from our advertisers. Farm interviews come from all across the area, and experts write about forage and dairy herd management.

As usual, the first of our dairy contest recipes will be published, and our livestock, grain, and auction reports and regular columns will be in place.

Watch for next week's special tribute to the dairy farmers and agri-businesses which help provide the consumer with all those good dairy products.

Special Note: Our office will be closed Monday, May 31, to observe Memorial Day. But our office will reopen for business at 8 a.m. Tuesday morning.

Tobacco Planting Off To Slow Start

Like other crops this year, tobacco planting in Lancaster County is off to a slow start. A few farmers in the Ephrata area had plants under glass, and small patches were planted as early as two weeks ago. Farmers who depend on plants shipped from the South were reported still waiting late this week.

Several farmers started to plant from locally grown outdoor beds. In the photo, from left, Robert, Gary, and Richard Neff were pulling tobacco plants on one of their farms along Sheep Lane southwest of Millersville Thursday morning. The Neffs began to plant on Monday, and the plants were growing fast enough to keep the planter going. High winds Thursday dried the fields and was hard on the newly planted tobacco.

Many farmers say they will reduce acres planted because of the unprofitability of last year's prices. The Neffs usually plant 22 to 25 acres. This year they will plant 20 acres that include three or four acres of Maryland type. They don't understand a market that saw a range of $.50 to $1.20 last year, but two years ago they received a good price. So they keep planting each year and take the bad years with the good years. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

WHEAT PRICES CONTINUED TO DECLINE, WEDNESDAY, ON IDEAS FOR BUMPER WINTER WHEAT YIELDS AND LET UP IN EXPORT PURCHASES; CORN PRICES INCHED HIGHER ON CONCERNS THAT CROP REDUCTION STILL POSSIBLE; SOYBEAN PRICES JUMPED MODERATELY ON REPORTS BRAZILIAN BEAN PRICES HIGHER, HARVEST DELAYS IN ARGENTINA AND EXPORT OPTIMISM. WHEAT 3 TO 6 CENTS LOWER. CORN UNCHANGED TO 1 CENT HIGHER. SORGHUM 1 TO 4 CENTS HIGHER. SOYBEANS 5 TO 6 CENTS HIGHER. WINTER WHEAT CROP LOOKING VERY GOOD AND POSSIBILITY FOR BUMPER YIELDS PRESSURED WHEAT PRICES. USDA REPORTS INDICATE WINTER WHEAT CONDITION RATED 58 PERCENT GOOD AND 17 PERCENT EXCELLENT. VERY LITTLE EXPORT ACTIVITY FOR WHEAT THIS WEEK, ADDED TO DECLINES. CORN PRICES TURNED SLIGHTLY HIGHER AS TRADERS WORRY THAT SWITCHING TO BEANS MAY STILL HAPPEN DUE TO THE LATE CORN PLANTING. USDA'S CROP PROGRESS REPORT SHOWED CORN PLANTED AS OF MAY 23, AT 71 PERCENT COMPLETE COMPARED TO 87 PERCENT THE NORM. LIGHT EXPORT DEMAND ALSO STRENGTHENED CORN PRICES. MODERATELY HIGHER SOYBEAN PRICES REFLECTED REPORTS OF HIGHER BEAN PRICES IN BRAZIL AND HARVEST DELAYS IN ARGENTINA. OPTIMISM FOR INCREASED EXPORT DEMAND FOR BEAN AND BEAN BY-PRODUCTS SUPPORTED PRICES.

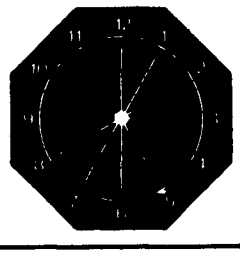
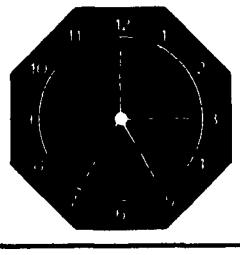
DRAG AUGER FEEDING SCHEDULE?



BIG DUTCHMAN CHAIN FEEDER FEEDING SCHEDULE!



How often do your feeders run in a day? It is generally necessary to operate drag auger feeders as many as eight or more times per day because of limited feeding space and the small quantity of feed presented at one time. That creates tremendous competition for the little feed available. The result of this competition is damaged eggs... from feet, toes and collisions Big Dutchman chain feeders can feed your flock by running as few as three or four times a day, with little competition for feed, a calmer flock and fewer cracks and checks.

IF YOU ARE...
FORCED TO FEED
more than four times a day or during peak laying periods, call 911 for your egg casualties or. . . call (717) 393-5807 for information on how our chain feeder pampers your product. . . from cage to carton.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MAY 31-JUNE 6, 1993

CASEY AT THE BAT

Ernest Lawrence Thayer was paid five dollars for his final column in the San Francisco Examiner "Casey" appeared under the pen name "Phin" in the Sunday edition, June 3, 1888, and no one, least of all Thayer, ever dreamt that it would be remembered and recited more than a hundred years later. The ballad did not create a stir until later that summer when comedian William DeWolf Hopper recited it at Wallach's Theater in New York. The New York Times reported that the "thrilling ode . . . was most uproariously received." Newspapers and magazines reprinted it, and vaudevillians brought down the house across the country.

Only man has dignity; only man, therefore, can be funny. — Father Knox

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ For easier ironing, insert a rolled up a magazine in the sleeve then let the magazine unroll and it's ready to press.

EARTHWISE

Now that picnic season is here, look for recycled paper products for your picnic needs. Recycled paper napkins are now available in most grocery stores, and some specialty stores and catalogs even carry soft brown napkins made from 100% post-consumer waste. These brown-paper products create a demand for low-grade waste (such as newspapers, cardboard, and phone books) that otherwise often go from the recycling center to the landfill simply because paper companies won't buy them.

YANKEE COLE SLAW

- 1 small head cabbage, shredded
- 3 sticks celery, chopped
- 1 tablespoon dry mustard
- ¼ cup vinegar
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg beaten
- salt and pepper
- 1 apple cored, and chopped
- ½ cup sour cream

Combine cabbage and celery. Mix mustard with 1 tablespoon vinegar. Heat remaining vinegar to boiling; stir in mustard, sugar, egg, salt, and pepper. Cook over low heat, stirring, until thick. Pour hot sauce over cabbage, mix well, and chill. Mix in apple and sour cream just before serving.

Makes 6 servings.

OPINION

Need Best Funding Possible

For the past two state budget cycles, the agricultural community has been greatly concerned by the elimination of state funding for Penn's vet school. This is as it should be. Livestock is an essential part of our agriculture and the animal health issues of the last few years should prove without question that top quality veterinary education is essential to our state's animal agriculture. Yet we must also be concerned about the more gradual reduction of state support that goes to Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Its research and cooperative extension activities are our investment in agriculture's future and the means to deliver new information to the farmer. This system has served agriculture well in Pennsylvania and it is gradually being weakened by reduced state support.

The College of Agricultural Sciences is part of Penn State University. However, the University receives only 18% of its total budget from state sources. In contrast, the College of Ag Sciences receives 69% of its total budget from appropriated sources. Only 8.1% of the College budget comes from university sources such as tuition and education and general funds appropriated to Penn State. Agriculture at Penn State is much more dependent on state support than any other part of the University. In 1992, permanent state funding was cut over $1.88 million for ag research and extension. In addition, over the past two years, the state has required the one-time return of funds either appropriated or promised to the College amounting to another $1.4 million.

The impacts of these funding cuts on research programs have been extensive. Badly needed research has been curtailed or delayed. It is difficult to understand how the Commonwealth can legislate improvements in nutrient management while reducing those programs designed to research the very methods and knowledge we will need to do the job. In addition, many important faculty positions have gone vacant for lack of funds. Some county extension offices are operating with clearly inadequate staff while many continue with reduced staff.

Everyone is aware that these are tough times for farmers and public policy makers alike. The agricultural community, including the College of Agricultural Sciences, has been willing to make the changes necessary to reasonably reduce public expenditures. But when enrollments at the College of Ag Sciences rise over 28% since 1988 and agriculture remains the state's number one industry, it is time to stop reducing our commitment to research and extension if we want viable farms and competitive agricultural industries. We are all aware that public funds are tight and no one wants higher taxes. Yet the state spent 5.1% more for all of its programs last year. Surely room can be found this year to halt the reduction in funding for Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. We urge the General Assembly to appropriate and the Governor to approve the best possible funding for ag research and extension.

To Appreciate Fast Food

McDonald's Big Mac was created 25 years ago this month. This hamburger gets most of the credit for making the fast food sandwich the icon it has become.

The Big Mac (two all beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, onion and pickles on a sesame seed bun) was created and named by Jim Delligatti, a McDonald's franchisee in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Since its creation, McDonald's reports more than 14 billion have been served in 66 countries. For cattle producers, the sales of Big Macs alone has accounted for more than 7 billion pounds of "all beef" in retail sales since 1968.

This marketing story may be repeated for eggs, chickens, and ham. As farmers, we must remember the consumer determines the price and success of our commodities.

Supply and demand still determines price. As demand increases, price and supply will also increase. Profits are more easily made in a growing demand situation. To place your commodity in a growing demand situation, you need to support the development of new consumer products. The Big Mac was an example of this.

As one agricultural leader said, "You are either growing or dying as a business — there is no standing still." So, to keep your farm growing, you need to support funding for new products and advertising.

To Take Part Ownership Of Flocks

Contracts have been an important part of agriculture for many years. As capital investment requirements increased, coupled with the high risk of agricultural prices, the prudent farmer turned to contracts to protect his investment.

This increase in investment was the result of mechanization and the resulting increase in productivity. Now, egg producers have the opportunity to become independent producers again.

Through investor flocks, the farmer may buy a percentage of his flock. By owning 10 or more percent of the flock, he is now back to the size flock his father or grandfather owned as independents. This now reduces flock ownership to the size where the family could assume the price risk.

Flock ownership will give you monthly production and financial information. It will give you a chance to share in the profits or losses for the flock. Your contract payment for the remaining birds would be used to cover your fixed costs.

If you decide to take part ownership of your flock, remember this must be an every-year participation program. The profits in egg production vary from year to year.

The quickest way to lose money is to try and figure out the good years. Before investing in layers, be sure to talk with your banker and other financial advisors to make sure you have enough equity to assume this additional risk.

Footnote: Other agricultural enterprises contracting with farmers may want to consider developing part ownership programs as a way to increase the interest of farmers and reward them for better performance.

To Keep Hogs Cool This Summer

When the the thermometer hits 90 F., hogs reach the "upper critical temperature," according to the National Pork Producers Council's Swine Care Handbook.

Water-based cooling systems are the best way to keep hogs comfortable when temperatures rise. Drippers, misters, sprayers, and evaporative pads are some of the water-based cooling systems available.

If you use drippers, make sure the water outlets are not clogged. The same applies to mister nozzles and sprinklers. The relatively low cost of dripper nozzles makes replacement a reasonable option when they become clogged.

Check automatic controls on these units as well. If you do not have drippers, now is the time to install them. They should pay for themselves in one summer.

When temperatures exceed 85 F., sows take in 40 percent less feed and reduce milk production about 40 percent. This will translate to a drop in litter weights and potentially increase preweaning mortality. Also, finishing pigs will gain less weight per day.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "No quality is so essential to success as the quality of perseverance. It overcomes almost everything, even nature."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

"LET'S BE REALISTIC!"
May 30, 1993

Background Scripture:
Phillippans 2:1-18.
Devotional Reading:
John 14:1-14.

I have recently finished reading John T. Alexander's biography of Catherine The Great (Oxford University Press, 1989) and was struck by the role that the sense of duty played in her era. It was so important then and is almost nonexistent now. I suppose the skein of duty has been unraveling for many years, but we have certainly experienced its demise in our own time. While certainly no historian, it seems to me that it was the 60"s that did in duty, humility and self-sacrifice.

I understand why this happened — at least I think I do: it was a reaction to the sense of duty carried to absurd dimensions, those who acted like wild beasts during World War II and, when challenged, responded that they were "only" doing their duty. And, in the 1950"s during the Cold War and even the hot war in Korea, many rebelled against mindless obedience to duty. But it was Viet Nam in the 60"s that brought the coup de grace. This was also the era of the "me-first" revolution and we were told to do whatever feels good to us, an admonition that still is much with us.

WINDS OF CHANGE

Perhaps our society was overdue to break out of some of its stifling conformity and I believe that to some degree these winds of change were necessary. But anything can be carried beyond the point where it continues to be good and constructive. We have gone too far and it is time for us to embrace once more the concepts of duty and serving others, although not necessarily in the fatalistic way as before.

The key, I believe, is whether the sense of duty and self-sacrifice is imposed upon us from outside or embraced by us within as "our own thing." Paul points us to Christ as our model: "Have this mind among yourselves, which you have in Christ Jesus, who, though he was in the form of God, did not count equality with God a thing to be grasped, but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant..." (2:5-7). This passage makes it clear that obedience to the cross was not something that was thrust upon Jesus by either God or man. Servanthood was something he chose willingly. That is not to say that he wanted to be a martyr, but that he did not want to back away from his mission. He had a choice — the cross was not inevitable or inescapable — and his choice was the role of a servant. Because he chose God's will, the cross became for him, not something alien, but an expression of his own desire.

HOW WE SEE IT

Once more, it is a matter of how we perceive things, in this case: servanthood. As the world sees it, the role of the servant is the role of one who is not in charge of his or her own life. To be autonomous means to be able to do what we choose to do. And there is the rub, Jesus chose to serve and so servanthood was not demeaning to him. He felt no loss of self in offering himself. In fact, we may infer that he felt truly fulfilled. Servanthood is only demeaning if imposed upon us. But if we choose it, we lose nothing and we are none the less for it. In fact, we are more.

Paul shows us how much more, rather than less, Christ was for his choice: "Therefore God has highly exalted him and bestowed on him the name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow...and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord..." (2:9-11). So, Paul is not calling us to Christian servanthood to impose upon us something that we do not want, but to offer us a fulfillment that putting "me-first" can never give us. It is o.k., even necessary, to do "your own thing" when, in doing it, you are also first of all doing his thing. When they are one and the same, we experience the highest possible gain. We do not have to choose between serving others and fulfilling ourselves, for they are one and the same.

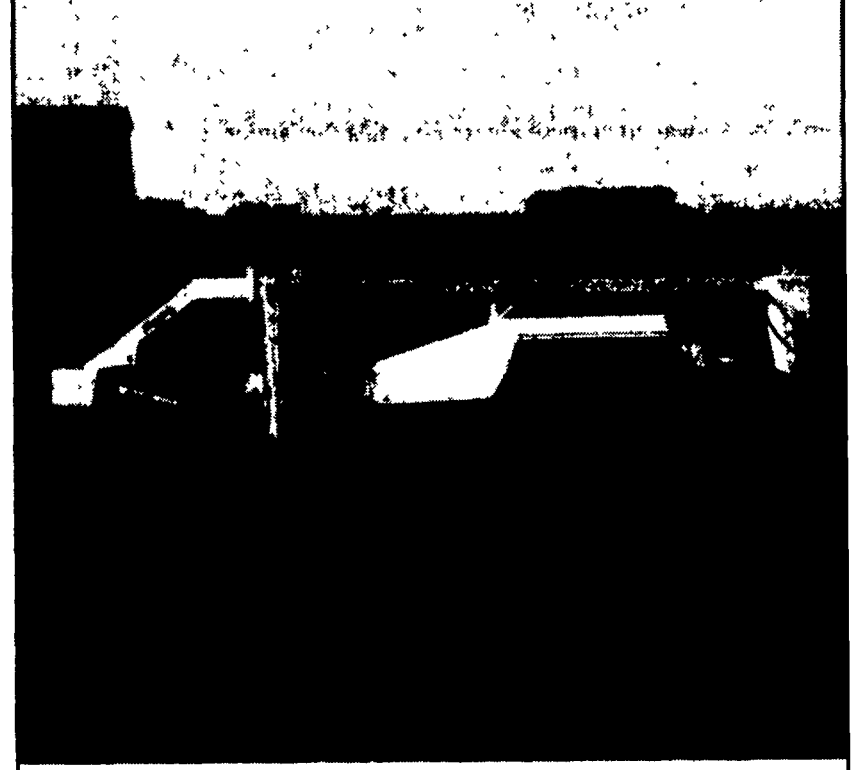
Cuts more than hay. Cuts time.



New Idea 5212 Disc Mower Conditioners cut a big 11'9" swath and condition with 9'6" intermeshing rolls. It's a wider version of our well-known 5209. With it, you cut and condition lots of hay...every trip. And that means you cut time.

Because the New Idea modular disc cutterbar design makes routine maintenance simple and, although unlikely, repairs a breeze; there's less downtime, too.

Best of all, you'll find our disc mower conditioners are just one segment of our hay equipment line. Others include round balers, disc mowers, sickle mowers and mower conditioners, rakes and hay handling equipment.

Model 484 with optional bale slicer up to Heidel Hollow's standards. The less-than-ideal growing conditions also put a dent in sales — about 4,000 tons last year, according to Fink. This year, he said, he'd like to market 5,000 tons or better.

In contrast to the beginning of the year, which was simply too wet and cool for too long, Fink, like many farmers, got off to a slow start in planting. "We were two weeks behind," he said. "Everything got two weeks behind."

The delay won't affect the third cutting, but possibly some fourth cuttings, according to the farmer.

Manage 1,000 acres

The Finks — David, his father Orrin, David's wife Sonia, and sons Travis, 19 and Michael, 15, in addition to neighbor Richard Bachman — manage 1,000 acres in the rolling hills of northwestern Lehigh County. The farm, Heidel Hollow, took its name from Heidelberg Township, where they are based, and the natural hollow in the hills where the farmstead sits. The area was first farmed by Fink's great-grandmother's uncle, a Hunsicker. The farm was named by Glenn Ellenberger, a former county extension agent.

Six hundred acres remain in alfalfa, mixes, and timothy. The remaining 400 are rotated with corn and oats to get them ready for alfalfa. This year, about 160 acres of new alfalfa (about 80 acres of pure and the rest mixes and timothy) were started using several commercial varieties.

According to the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council newsletter, Fink usually keeps an alfalfa stand for three to four years. Fields are limed and fertilized using nutrients in the chicken manure according to soil test recommendations prior to seeding. The first cut is taken early in the spring and subsequent cuttings are taken frequently enough to allow three to four harvests per year.

According to the Certified Alfalfa Council, Fink's alfalfa production has averaged more than four tons per acres for several years. The hay is cut with a drying agent applied and baled with a preservative.

The hay is square-baled and accumulated in piles in a field. A hay rack is used to arrange and stack 10 bales per row, seven rows high, on six-foot by 8-foot pallets. The bales are dried using heated, forced air (about 20 percent of the hay is heat dried, or about 100 tons per week) and stacked on pallets in the warehouse until shipped.

Some bales, which measure 14 inches by 18 inches by 22 inches, are "compressed" to more than twice their density using a hay compressor machine and warehoused. About 620 bales are made to store in a 40-foot ocean container. (Fink said it is volume, not weight, that makes up overseas shipping charges.)

Raises layers

The haymaking operation was started by Fink, a Delaware Valley College graduate, in 1973. But the farm has remained a poultry and potato operation since he grew up there.

The farm also raises about 38,000 layers, one of the few independent egg producer processors left, according to Fink.

"There's only about 1,000 of us left in the United States," he said. "At one time, there was probably that many in Lancaster."

The egg operation ships more than 600 cases or about 2,000 dozen eggs per week. They service all types of accounts, said Fink, including restaurants, hotels, hospitals, grocery stores, and others. Quality and service are the keys to the success of the business, according to Fink.

Compresses alfalfa

But it was a while ago when Fink realized the potential of selling hay not only domestically, but internationally. About 50 percent of his business bales and compresses fresh quality alfalfa (much of it tested regularly, at 20-30 tests per year) overseas, especially to horse farms in the Caribbean and in Europe (about 55 percent of the total shipped). The other 45 percent is comprised of dairy and other livestock farms overseas.

Also, some of the hay is used to make mulch, said Fink.

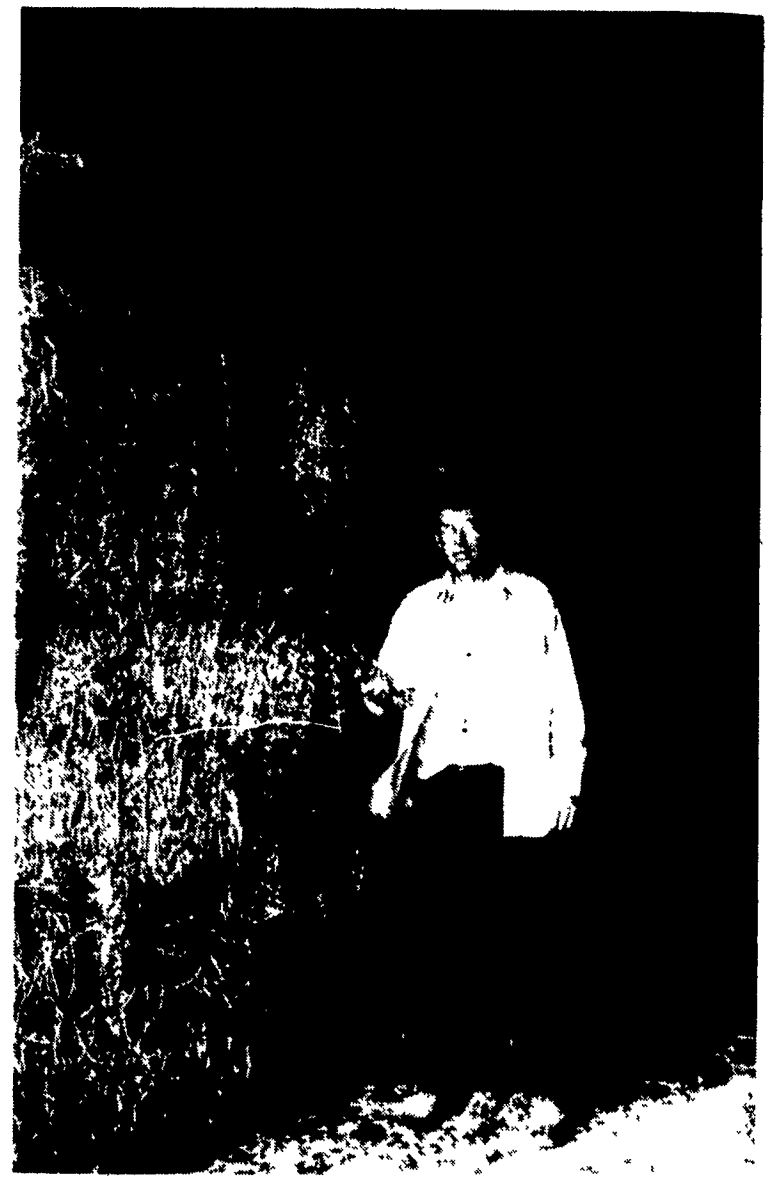
Sales are helped along by some of the work he does as eastern chairman of the Market Development Committee, a part of the National Hay Association.

The Association has about 600 members nationwide. As chair of the market committee, Fink helps producers find buyers for their product in this region. He acts as a sort of broker for producers and a liaison for those who sell hay retail.

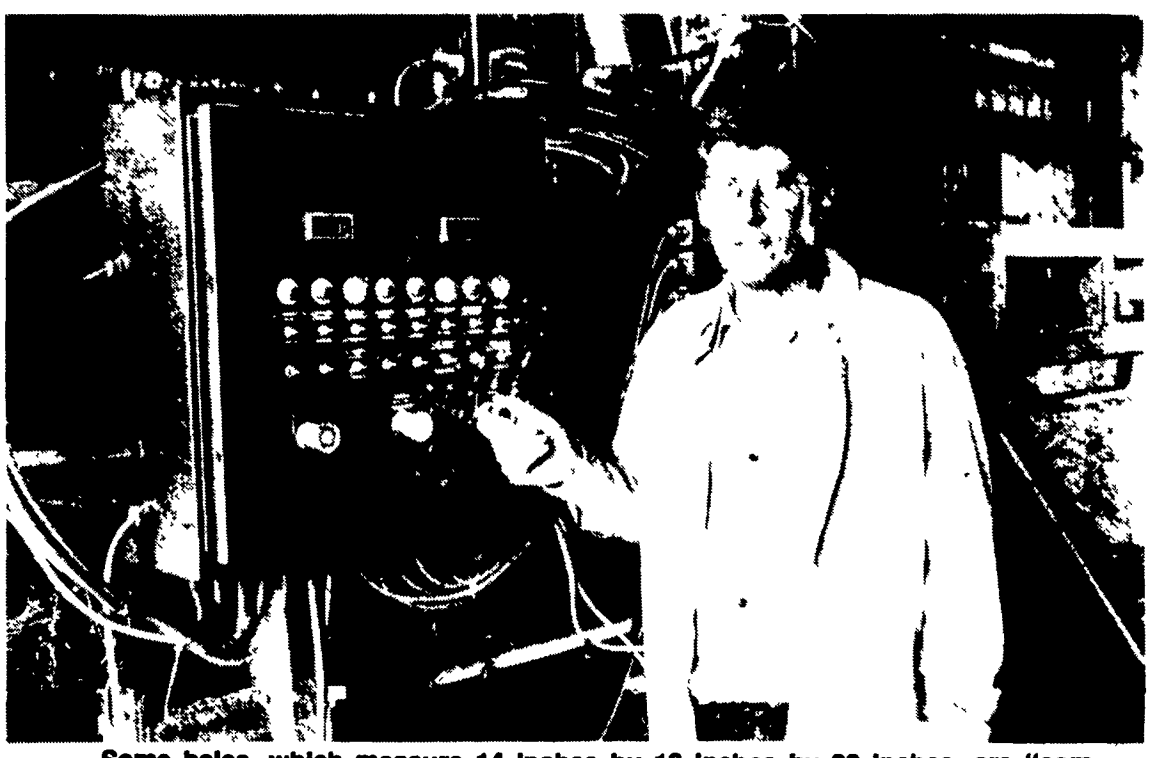
The Association is made up primarily of producers, according to Fink. "But there's room for more," he said. "There should be a lot more."

Fink said the recognition is "quite an achievement" and will help in marketing his hay.

For his farm's efforts in producing and promoting the "queen of forages," and for serving the industry, David Fink was recently honored with the Producer Award for the Northeast region from the Certified Alfalfa Seed Council at this year's alfalfa awards program in Appleton, Wis.



According to the Certified Alfalfa Council, David Fink's alfalfa production has averaged more than four tons per acres for several years. The bales are dried using heated, forced air (about 100 tons per week at the peak of the season in September) and stacked on pallets in the warehouse until shipped.



Some bales, which measure 14 inches by 18 inches by 22 inches, are "compressed" to twice their density using this hay compressor machine and warehoused. About 620 bales (approximately 24 tons) are made to store in a 40-foot ocean container.

The hay is square-baled and accumulated in piles in a field. This hay rack is used to arrange and stack 10 bales per row, seven rows high, on six-foot by eight-foot pallets.

National Beef Board To Meet In Hershey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Beef producers from across the country will gather June 25 and 26 in Hershey for the Cattleman's Promotion and Research Board's (Beef Board) semi-annual meeting. The Beef Board is the national industry organization which maintains oversight responsibilities for the $1 per head beef checkoff program.

"We feel very fortunate to host this national meeting," says Ralph McGregor, a dairy farmer from York County, and one of Pennsylvania's two representatives on the 109-member national board. Pennsylvania's other representative on the board is Ralph Dotterer, a cattle feeder from Clinton County.

"It is only fitting that this group, whose purpose is to build consumer demand for beef and veal, has chosen an Northeastern meeting sight close to many of the major cities," McGregor says.

The meeting begins on Friday, June 25, at 8:00 a.m. with the opening general session at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center. The Friday afternoon sessions will be devoted to committee meetings on Domestic Market Analysis, Foreign Market Analysis, Integrated Public Relations and Product Development/Industry Response. The Collections Subcommittee, and the Planning and Producer Communications Committees will meet Friday evening.

On Saturday, June 26, the morning session will feature detailed program reports in promotion, research, consumer information, industry information and foreign marketing. That afternoon the Beef Board will review and take action on their $44 million annual budget.

The meeting will conclude with the "Old-Fashioned Pennsylvania Dutch Picnic" at a Lancaster County Farm.

"For many of the cattlemen, this will be their first opportunity to see Pennsylvania agriculture first hand," says McGregor. "Although most of their time in Hershey will be spent in meetings, we did want to provide an opportunity for them to gain an appreciation of our agricultural industry."

All sessions are open to the public, however, advance reservations are requested. All meal functions require advance ticket purchase.

Producers interested in attending the meetings and/or purchasing meal tickets can make reservations by contacting the Pennsylvania Beef Council at (717) 545-6000 by June 14.

Young Dairy Leaders Institute Extends Deadline

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The first major project of the Holstein Foundation is its Young Dairy Leaders Institute, scheduled to begin February 1994.

However, anyone applying has little time remaining — the deadline for applications is July 15. That deadline is extended from the original June 1 deadline.

The institute is to be an intensive leadership and issues awareness program for those who seek to become more involved with deciding the direction of the dairy industry.

According to the application form, The Young Dairy Leaders Institute is a national program with the goal of "focusing on the growing need for advanced leadership and personal development training for young producers in the ever-changing dairy industry.

"It is the objective of the Institute to stimulate and prepare young dairy producers to play a more active role in directing the future of the dairy industry through positive involvement in the dairy and general agricultural industries, their communities and the political process."

Young dairy producers across the nation are being encouraged to apply for the program which, in the interest of maintaining a quality, intensive program, has a goal of limiting the institute to 100 people.

A 12-part application contains five sections which require essay type responses. Three letters of reference are requested to accompany the application.

Those wishing more information about the institute, or seek an application should write to the Holstein Foundation, Young Dairy Leaders Institute Selection Committee, P.O. Box 816, Brattleboro, Vt 05302-0816.

Conservancy Protects Berks Farm

WYOMISSING (Berks Co.) — The Berks County Conservancy's Farmland Protection Program recently assisted a dedicated Centre Township farm family to protect their 409-acre farm for future generations.

Working with the Conservancy, Edward and Mildred Unterkofler, Mohrsville, have placed an agricultural conservation easement on their farm that ensures the farm will never be developed. The easement document allows for the possibility of building lots for family members, but most of the 409 acres will remain permanently agricultural.

Edward Unterkofler was raised on a farm less than one mile from where he now lives. He and his wife bought this farm in 1936, the year they were married and they raised three children there. The farm, now operated by a son, is a crop and livestock operation with several free-range chicken flocks.

culture 1992 Statistical Summary. There are woodlots, fence rows, and more than a mile of frontage along the Schuylkill River.

The Unterkoflers have spent more than 57 years improving and caring for this farm. The Agricultural Conservation Easement guarantees that a bulldozer eager to build another housing development or shopping mall won't destroy the Unterkofler's life-time farming effort. The farm will continue to contribute to Berks County's agricultural economy and farm family heritage.

Dairy Production In Constant Flucuation

ROBERT YONKERS
PSU Ag Economist

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Dairy producers are increasingly adjusting milk production in response to changes in milk prices.

High milk prices in late 1989 and early 1990 resulted in producers slowing the rate of decline in cow numbers. In fact, cow numbers were even above year-earlier levels for a few months in late 1990.

This pattern repeated itself last year, when 1992 milk prices were well above 1991 levels, and once again the rate of decline in cow numbers slowed considerably.

Meanwhile, changes in output-per-cow appear to be related to more than just milk prices.

A poor forage-growing season clearly contributed to year-over-year declines in milk per cow in late 1989, and slower increases in late 1992. However, low milk prices were probably responsible for the slow growth and even declines in output per cow during most of 1991.

Cow numbers on farms and average output per cow combined add up to total milk production.

It is apparent that the relationship between production and prices has been strong in recent years (See the chart for Year-Over-Year Percent Change In Total Milk Production.).

Year-over-year declines in total milk production during most of 1989 resulted in a close milk supply-demand balance, which lead to stronger milk prices in late 1989 and early 1990.

Dairy producers responded to this market signal by boosting milk production to the point in late 1990 where milk supplies exceeded the demand for dairy products. The result here was the low milk prices during the first half of 1991.

While the milk production increases during mid-1992 almost equalled those of 1990, the rate of growth in milk production slowed late in the year and has remained low in early 1993. So, instead of milk prices dropping like in late 1990 and early 1991 due to supplies exceeding demand, milk buyers have been worried about attracting enough milk to meet their needs this year.

The result has been rapid and large increases in cheese prices (see figure on next page) this spring which have kept milk prices up. But remember, if dairy producers respond to this market signal by increasing milk production later this year to the point where supplies exceed demand, prices could fall just as rapidly. This is why so many in the industry are saying that the key to milk prices in 1993 is milk production.

A Lot Of Grass Harvested This Week

Arlyn Musser harvests first cutting alfalfa on rented ground along Auction Road southwest of Manheim in Lancaster County. The rain this spring caused late planting of corn but made the grass and alfalfa grow very well. The good drying weather this week gave farmers the opportunity to make hay or harvest the crop for the silos.

The State crop report said hay stands across the state looked good, but new alfalfa plantings were stressed with the drier soil conditions. Weevil damage was reported and was substantial in some areas. Pasture conditions were good to excellent, and there was widespread grazing across the state.

Panic Pierces The Heart

KENNETH L. WINEBARK
Lebanon County Agent

Panic pierces the heart when suddenly our children aren't beside us.

All of us have been there. Here's the scenario.

It might have taken place in the shopping mall. You were busy looking for that special gift. The little ones were at your side. The kids and the store were hopping with excitement over the upcoming holiday. When suddenly, you sensed something was missing.

Little Brandon or Janine wasn't there.

You start to look around. Soon you're calling out their name, first calmly, but before long you're frantically screaming at the top of your lungs.

(Turn to Page A25)

This collage of scenes from the Lebanon County 4-H Safety Club illustrates the variety of programs and hands-on educational activities which have been put into place to better ensure the safety and survivability of the county's agricultural youth. Pictured in the top row, from left to right, first year 4-Her Jason Gahres concentrates on perfecting his tractor driving, while 4-H leader Ronnie Lehman demonstrates how to check proper exhaust on a tractor. In the second row, from left to right, Ronnie Lehman demonstrates the torque of a tractor's power take off (PTO), Laura Hitz learns how to properly operate and handle a garden tractor, Michall Ungemach demonstrates entrapment of children in flowing grain in a gravity box wagon, and Christopher Bennetch enjoys his training on a lawn and garden tractor course. In the third row, from the left, 4-H teen leader Michael Blecker demonstrates the tractor and manure spreader course for 4-H tractor safety members, Jaclyn Troutman shares her "Keep Farm Kids Safe" poster with Dr. Albert Price, director of the Lancaster County Safe Kid Coalition and speaker for Lebanon's 1993 4-H Roundup, while 4-H teen leader Jason Blatt measures the distance between the cart and the stall line that was part of tractor driver training. George Dice, Occupational Hazard Club member looks on. In the photo at left, Occupational Hazard leader Pete Hanson reviews the tractor training course with some of his students.

Panic Pierces The Heart

They are gone — kidnapped. That's got to be my ultimate fear — my child being kidnapped. I just can't imagine the loss of my children. Yet why should I fear a kidnapping?

Another scenario has proven to be more dangerous.

It might take place at the PTO shaft, the gravity box wagon, the silo, or the extra rider site on the tractor.

Yes, this scenario is our farms.

Each year about 300 kids are taken from our farms. No, not by kidnappers but by our own neglect. Whether it be crushing in a tractor roll over, suffocation in a gravity box wagon, an arm caught in an auger, or pants caught in the PTO. We kill too many farm kids.

This past week was National Safe Kids Week. Whether you are on the farm or live in town, it's time we sit up and take note. There are too many accidents around us. We are injuring and yes, even killing too many children.

Let's see what we can do to save our children.

Farms have always been hazardous work places. But trauma in children on farms is occurring in epidemic proportions. Farming is now the most dangerous occupation and children bear the brunt of the accident load.

In fact, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Indiana, and Wisconsin data shows that 14 percent to 24 percent of total farm accidents involve children under the age of 16.

There are a number of factors that contribute to the dangers for children on farms. Many of these same factors can be felt around the home.

• Increased Mechanization — Machinery injuries have surpassed other types of injuries, and are a major cause of fatalities among farm kids. Many of these injuries are caused by old equipment manufactured prior to safety standards. However, modern equipment may endanger more kids just because its easier to operate. Hence, we think kids are capable of doing the task.

• Stressful Economic Conditions — Tight financial times may be placing more and more smaller children in the role of hired hand. But, maybe more of a factor is that parents have gone off the farm to find additional employment to make ends meet. Thus kids may have less supervision.

Studies have shown that when you adjust for the amount of time each worker is in the workplace, children have nearly a 50 percent higher accident rate.

So, what can be done to turn this alarming fact around?

There may be a lot of alternatives — required safety classes with lowered insurance premiums, federal standards for machinery, mandatory safety devices, or tougher laws.

The things that I find puzzling though is why? Why do we have to have someone else force us to clean up our act. Why not do it for our children's sake — for our family's sake!

There are some barriers on the farm. First, farmers live in the midst of their work and many children and adults simply aren't aware of the danger — the hazards.

Secondly, there is a strong desire to instill the "work ethic."

"It's our rural belief that kids should help with farm work," states Bob Aherin, University of Illinois Extension Safety Specialist. "But the benefits often don't outweigh the risks."

The third factor is that farmers like to avoid government regulations. Farm kids, working on the family farm, don't have to be licensed, or in fact even trained, to operate equipment or perform adult jobs.

The fact is no other industry tolerates children being killed like agriculture does. To me that's deplorable.

The 4-H Program in Lebanon County has been on the move to change this trend. Six years ago one of my 4-H moms came to me and wanted to start something new — a 4-H Tractor Safety Program. She was very concerned about keeping farm kids safe and so was I.

With a sense of urgency, enthusiasm and vengeance, the Lebanon

The new Parker 650 grain wagon from Kuker-Parker provides 650-bushel capacity.

Parker's 650 Grain Wagon Provides 650-Bushel Capacity

OMAHA, Neb. — The new, Parker 650 grain wagon from Kuker-Parker, Industries, provides 650-bushel capacity. The 650 keeps pace with highest capacity harvesting machines and increases harvesting efficiency and productivity.

One-piece 3/16 inch water jet cut plate end supports, corrugated side panels (that prevent buckling), and 4-inch top rail lip (that prevents spillage) all contribute to the 650's increased strength. The wagon's understructure built from heavy 6-inch x 3-inch structural channel sills and formed 10 gauge steel also adds strength and provides better load distribution.

A true 20-ton wagon gear supports the wagon's larger capacity loads and keeps it balanced in rought terrain. Oversize tires distribute weight, minimizing compaction.

Steep sloped ends, tapered front panel and oversize discharge door allow the 650 to unload quickly. A diverter chute lets user direct flow for center or side discharge.

Other features include tubular steel ladder, plug-in connector, telescoping wagon tongue, breakaway chain that activates brakes in an emergency, metering door, inertia hydraulic brakes (all four wheels), and signal lights.

Beef Council to Join Ag Leaders In Washington

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Harry S. Stambaugh of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, will join other agricultural leaders in Washington, D.C., for the U.S. Meat Export Federation's (USMEF) board of directors meeting and Foreign Buyers Conference, June 2-5.

In addition to officials from the meat, livestock and feed grain sectors, more than 100 foreign buyers will take part in the event.

According to Stambaugh, export markets continue to expand for U.S. red meat products (beef/pork/veal/lamb) around the world. "We set a record last year with export sales of $3.0 billion for U.S. red meat products ($2.5 billion for beef and veal, $522 million for pork, and $15 million for lamb, including variety meats). That's up 17 percent from the previous year for beef and veal and 26 percent for pork," Stambaugh said.

The Pennsylvania Beef Council is a long-standing member of USMEF and a strong supporter for USMEF efforts to increase demand for U.S. (beef/pork/lamb/red meat) products in foreign markets.

"Both the short- and long-term outlook for U.S. red maet exports are outstanding," said Stambaugh. In 1993, USMEF projects that beef and veal exports, including variety meats, will increase to $2.8 billion (a 12 percent increase over 1992) and that U.S. pork exports, including variety meats, will climb to $614 million (an 18 percent increase over 1992). By the year 2000, USMEF forecasts that total U.S. red meat exports will top $7.2 billion, more than double their current levels.

The Washington meeting will focus on key issues affecting the industry's future in export markets. Among these issues, according to Stambaugh, are proposed cuts in USDA export programs for value-added products, the North American Free Trade Agreement, and emerging trade opportunities in Korea and the China Pacific region.

Eleven foreign trade teams from Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Mexico, Korea, Singapore, and the Caribbean will attend the USMEF meeting and foreign buyers conference. "The USMEF meeting is also an excellent opportunity for the U.S. industry to meet in person with foreign buyers to talk about our production practices and our quality assurance programs. These areas make a real difference in distinguishing U.S. products in foreign markets," said Stambaugh. "This is also a unique opportunity for us to learn firsthand what we need to do to increase export sales and to compete more effectively with other exporting countries."

Panic Pierces The Heart

County 4-H Tractor Safety Program was born.

Through tremendous dedication, Fran and Dale Bushong built our 4-H Tractor Safety Club. Their enthusiasm bubbled over into the kids and other leaders.

The program grew to cover four safety units plus the tractor safety and certification program. Even though the Bushongs are no longer its leaders, a core of dedicated, and excellent leaders have been maintained.

Over the years, the club has had as its goals: to inspire our 4-H youth to think safety first; to provide 4-H youth with "hands on" tractor driving training; to train youth in proper tractor and equipment maintenance; and to provide a positive 4-H learning experience that develops the youth's practical skills and self worth while having fun.

Each year, the Lebanon County 4-H Tractor Safety Program has surpassed the club's goals. The 1993 Tractor Safety members were introduced to a core of new leadership that rose to the challenge of providing a great 4-H experience. This was done with the help and enthusiasm of four teen leaders that volunteered. All were members of last year's club and felt the desire to help out.

Though not a large club, two girls and 15 boys took the opportunity to learn through the 4-H Tractor Safety Program in 1993 which met weekly for 10 weeks from mid-January to April. The lessons included demonstrations, safety video tapes and "hands on" shop sessions.

The Unit 2 members met in the Lebanon Valley Implement Shop and many times they were up to their elbows in grease, tearing down engines, studying fuel systems, doing maintenance checks, etc.

The Occupational Hazard Unit chose to have two Saturday shop days at Messicks Farm Equipment.

Special friendships developed as 4-H'ers worked together in the classroom and preparing demonstrations. Carol Ungemach, 4-H'er Michael Ungemach's mother, shared how much her son learned and how great a time he had. She said, "That Tractor Club was something Michael was really into and he found a good friend in the club, Jarod Zimmerman. He just can't wait till he can work in the shop next year."

Another highlight of the club's year is the educational field trip. This year was no exception.

In mid-April, about 45 members, leaders, parents and other family members journeyed to the Fiat-New Holland manufacturing plant in New Holland. Fiat-New Holland personnel graciously hosted us to an exciting tour of the farm equipment plant.

Safety in the plant was stressed. It was very evident how far behind agriculture at the farm level is in relationship to industry when it comes to safety.

Late April brought the climax of the year. The Achievement Recognition Banquet was held at the Lebanon Valley Agricultural Center. Almost 80 people enjoyed a covered dish picnic dinner that was topped off by member awards and demonstrations and a special presentation by guest speaker, Dr. Albert Price, a Lancaster County medical doctor and Director of the Lancaster County Safe Kid Coalition.

Dr. Price's enthusiastic and heart felt talk on the urgency of making our farmsteads safer for our farm kids touched all.

Dr. Price praised the efforts of the 4-H leaders and members and challenged the families in attendance to take up the charge of farm safety and ensuring safety for our kids. He encouraged Lebanon County to take an even more aggressive approach.

Awards were presented to Jason Gahres, Michael Ungemach and Darren Brandt for being the top tractor drivers in Unit 1 and Unit 2, respectively.

Todd Getz was recognized for having the highest score on the Occupational Hazard test. George Dice was honored for having the best 4-H Record Book. Chris Wagner, Jeremy Troutman, Jason Blatt, and Mike Blecker were recognized for serving as teen leaders.

Jeremy Troutman was awarded a certificate for his achievements as Pennsylvania State 4-H Tractor Driving winner in 1992 and his placing of fifth at the Eastern National Agricultural Engineering Event in Richmond, Virginia.

Of course, recognition would not be complete without thanking those that make the 4-H Tractor Safety Training a hit — the 1993 4-H Tractor Safety Club leaders.

Those leaders of Unit 1 were Jim Dice and Carl Blatt, and Unit 2 leader was Ronnie Lehman. The Occupational Hazard Certification leaders were Pete and Ivan Hanson.

The sponsors for the banquet, awards and recognition were BHM Farm Equipment, Binkley and Hurst Inc., Evergreen Tractor Company, Fahnestock Farm Service, Mark Hershey Farms, Hubers Animal Health, JuVin Dale Holsteins, Keller Brothers, Lancaster Safe Kids Coalition, Lebanon Valley Implement Company, Carlos R. Leffler Inc., Messicks Farm Equipment, Calvin & Susie Miller Family, Oakenbound Holsteins, Promise Lane Farm, Stauffer Tractor Repair, Umbergers of Fontana, and Wengers Farm Machinery.

As we reflect on National Safe Kids Week, let us all take up the challenge set forth by Dr. Price — the challenge to make our farmsteads a safer place for our kids. Let this next week be your beginning to a safer workplace — your farm. Isn't your family worth that?

Maybe you are interested enough to get something started in your community or county. Through the 4-H Program and your Penn State Extension agent, we can assist you. Why not give us a call.

As we surge into the summer's growing season and anticipated harvest, let's take a moment to give thanks for keeping our family and family farm safe.

Don't let the panic of losing a loved one — your little Johnny or Mary — pierce your heart because of farm safety neglect.

They're not "just kids" they're YOUR kids.

SRBC Chairman Writes To Correct Headline

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—The headline on page 1 of Lancaster Farming's May 15, 1993, issue related to the Susquehanna River Basin Commission's (SRBC) decision that "Ag Should pay for using Susquehanna water" was incorrect. Actually, the commission postponed such a decision for another year by continuing ag's exemption. In addition, the commission consists of only four members, not five members, since the executive director is not a commission member.

Commission Chairman John R. McCarty writes: "Apparently, your reporter took one statement made by a Commissioner which questioned the wisdom of extending "regulatory" or "application fee" exemptions to any user and interpreted this as a "decision" by the Commission to revoke the current "application/monitoring fee" exemption for agriculture. Contrary to the implication of your headline and the first paragraph of the article, this exemption remains in effect for agriculture, and there is no immediate plan to revoke this exemption.

"Actually, this meeting item did not deal with "application/monitoring fees" at all, but with the question of how the Commission's consumptive use regulation should be applied to agricultural users. Ag users are not exempt from that regulation, though the Commission has had a suspension of the regulation in effect for agriculture since May, 1992.

"During the period of the suspension, the Commission appointed an "Agricultural Water Use Advisory Committee" to formulate recommendations concerning possible changes in the regulation as it affects agriculture. These recommendations were presented to the Commission at the May 13, 1993, meeting along with the SRBC staff recommendations.

The Commission rejected both the Committee's and the Staff's recommendations and adopted a resolution extending the suspension of the regulation pending adoption of some unspecified amendments or the expiration of one year, whichever occurs first. The staff was further directed to present a proposal to the Commission providing for the registration of all water users in the basin. Thus, the Commissionm made no decision at the meeting directing agriculture to pay for Susquehanna water as indicated by your headline."

Editor's Note: While it is true the Commission made no decision at the meeting directing agriculture to pay for Susquehanna water, the Commission's own news release of the 'meeting report' dated May 24, indicates the idea is on their minds. The news release says in part . . . "The Commission extended the current suspension of the regulation to agricultural users for up to one year while it . . . formulates possible amendments to the regulation including a procedure to register all water users. While taking no immediate action, the Commission made it clear that it does not favor a total exemption of agricultural uses" . . .

Proposed Seasonal Farm Labor Regulations

"The basis of the suit was (that DER failed in) implementing the regulations or the law in regard to mushroom regulations and, in particular, where growers were housing four or more unrelated persons," Brown said.

However, according to Brown, when DER agreed to end the legal dispute, attention to detail was not strong enough — the agency promised to include specific wording in the new regulations and that wording is in serious question.

According to Brown, the wording does more than address mushroom growers and doesn't fit the intent of the Season Farm Labor Act.

What makes it such a significant problem for agriculture is that DER is apparently unwilling to step away from the wording because it was included as a term of dropping the lawsuit. If the wording isn't included, DER could face the suit again.

The DER regulation proposal is on its way to being approved unless it can be stopped in the legislature or the Independent Regulatory Review Committee (IRRC).

Brown said that members should contact people in the House Conservation Comittee or the Senate Environmental and Energy Committee. "Those two (bodies) have oversight and (members) should express concern over the issue.

"Contact your representative and tell them that, as it is, (the regulations proposed) are unacceptable."

The intent of seasonal farm labor bills was to set guidelines to ensure that transient and seasonal farm laborers in actual camp situations, where workers are housed together or temporarily share rooms in buildings on a farm, are provided with reasonable amenities.

However, under the proposed regulations, in order for an operation to be considered a seasonal farm labor camp, "four or more unrelated persons" must be housed on a farm.

The definition of "four or more unrelated persons" is one of Brown's major complaints about the proposed regulations.

The definition proposed is, "At least four persons occupying living quarters owned, leased or operated by an employer or a farm labor contractor where at least one is unrelated to the others as a parent, spouse, child, brother or sister."

This can easily be applied to a wide variety of family farm situations.

Furthermore, when the "four or more" provision kicks in, DER would also consider all buildings on a property as quarters, unless soley occupied and reserved for the owner's use.

This means private residences on farms would be subject to DER inspections and regulation, and any agency involved with the welfare of farm laborers would be authorized to have unrestricted access to enter the property and home.

According to Brown, in practical terms a realistic scenario would be: A dairy farm owner hires a herdsman and provides a house as partial compensation. Later, the farmer also hires his nephew to help with haying for the summer with the nephew living in his uncle's house.

Under the proposed regulations, DER would consider the whole farm a seasonal farm labor camp and require inspections and conformity to all the regulations for maintaining a real seasonal farm labor camp.

Since DER's policy for enactment of the regulations is complaint-based, DER officials said during the review by the EQB meeting that the regulation would not affect forms of production agriculture other than those that traditionally use seasonal farm labor camps setups.

"They basically said, 'Trust us.'" Brown said. But at the same time, Brown said that Secretary of DER Arthur Davis "was quite forward in saying their interpretation would be . . . that (the dairy farm in Brown's scenario) would become a farm labor camp and they were very specific."

In addition to loss of rights to privacy by having a home suddenly be subject to government agency inspections, Brown said the regulations require such things as:

•A mandatory minimum ratio of window to floor space for each room, set at window space being equal to no less than 10 percent of the floor space. For a 100 square foot room (10 feet by 10 feet) that would mean a window of no less than 10 square feet.

•A written lease would be required, if the farmstead is declared a seasonal farm labor camp. You can no longer include the home as part of compensation.

•Well testing would be required for each residence with a first run laboratory fee running $800 to $1,200 per sample.

•Trash cans would have to be provided for each residence, complete with lids, or else a fine could be levied.

Brown criticized those who decided to settle the lawsuit with such wording.

"The only language in the agreement, it spelled out this (definition what makes a seasonal farm labor camp). In our opinion, they signed (the court stipulation) to get legal pressure off there back," Brown said. "They wanted to get out from under it. Our concern is that the stipulation agreement that they signed tied their hands and said we'll do what you want beyond the scope of the (Seasonal Farm Labor) Act.

On another front, efforts are coming from Philadelphia politicians to pass legislation which would provide many of the same rights to unionize, etc., to farm laborers as industrial laborers.

Brown said that PFA members should contact Rep. Robert Belfanti Jr., D-Mt. Carmel, who is chairman of the House Labor Relations Committee, and tell him that as they are, the proposed legislation is unacceptable and don't let them out of committee.

Specifically, Brown said, "We need to make it clear we do not support H.B.1050, 1051 and 1052, as written."

Trust Seeks Nominations For Awards

WSHINGTON, D.C. — American Farmland Trust, a national farmland conservation group based in Washington, announced it is accepting nominations for its 10th annual Agricultural Conservation awards.

The awards honor individuals and organizations making an outstanding contribution to the protection of the nation's agricultural resources. AFT established the awards in 1984 to encourage broad participation in agricultural resource conservation.

Awards recognize superior efforts by individuals, private groups, or governmental bodies that do either of the following:

* Establish or improve upon public policy that promotes farmland protection

* Protect the long-term viability of a specific farmland area, either by saving it from development or soil erosion or by promoting techniques that reduce the negative impacts of agricultural land use on the environment

* Communicate the need to conserve the country's agricultural resources

* Display a strong commitment to agricultural resource conservation by directly protecting farmland, funding special conservation projects, or adjusting farming operations to reduce negative impacts on agricultural land.

Nominations must include a one-page summary of the nominee's accomplishments. Supporting documentation of up to 10 pages must include three letters of recommendation, detailed descriptions or examples of the nominee's accomplishments, and any newspaper or magazine articles. Self-nominations are allowed. All nominations must include the names and addresses of the nominee and nominator.

Materials or questions should be sent to the Awards Coordinator, AFT's National Office, 1920 N Street, NW, Suite 400, Washington, DC 20036. Nominations must be received by Sept. 1, 1993. Awards will be presented at special ceremonies later this year.

Financial Analysis From A Lender's Perspective

Editor's Note: This is the last of a seven part series to explain how Farm Credit analyzes farm and ranch businesses.. A different aspect of financial analysis is addressed in each issue.

Off-farm income — stability for producers and lenders

As agricultural earning opportunities fluctuate, farm program payments decrease, and costs of living increase, many farmers and ranchers and their spouses are looking at the benefits of off-farm income to help them maintain a consistent life-style. Off-farm income can provide not only additional income and peace of mind but also important medical, insurance and retirement benefits.

Lenders also see the advantages of off-farm income to a customer's loan, as it generally improves the ability to repay proposed financing.

What constitutes off-farm income

Off-farm income consists of any income not received from the producer's farm operation, including:

- salary received working for another farmer/rancher;
- salary from a part- or full-time job in a related or separate industry by either spouse;
- salary or profits from a closely held business; and
- investment income.

How a lender evaluates off-farm income

Lenders will consider many factors when reviewing off-farm income, such as:

- Employment verification — Lenders will verify the source and amount of off-farm income. If the income comes from another job, an employment verification form will be sent to that employer. Questions pertaining to salary, length of tenure, and prospects for continued employment will be asked and evaluated. Lenders are interested in the stability of the income source.
- Income amount — Income is viewed in relative terms. For example, off-farm income of $20,000 generally has a greater impact on a part-time operation grossing $50,000 than on an operation grossing over $500,000.
- Commission or fluctuating income — Since this income tends to be less reliable and more volatile (also possibly more lucrative) than salaried positions, lenders will rely on an average amount over a three- to five-year period. Normally, neither the highest nor the lowest income year will be considered representative of expected income.
- Part-time farm income — Part-time farmers may choose to live in a rural setting for a variety of reasons. Lenders are able to loan funds even though off-farm income may be the primary source of income. In addition, off-farm income may be considered less volatile than certain farming enterprises.
- Improved repayment margin — Off-farm income may provide the primary repayment source for residence, vehicle or education loans, or other consumer purchases. This may provide comfort to the lender as the margin for repayment is improved. For example, if a farmer has off-farm income of $20,000, and his farm has projected earnings of $5,000, the total amount available for loan repayment is $25,000 versus $5,000 — a more comfortable margin.
- Reduced borrowing need— Because off-farm income would provide additional funds, the farmer may have less need for financing. For example, for a customer who has $100,000 available collateral, a lender might typically loan $70,000, leaving a $30,000 "buffer." Off-farm income of $20,000 may result in a need to borrow less, leaving a larger "buffer."
- More favorable interest rates — Improved repayment or collateral margins likely will allow lenders to provide more favorable interest rates, because lower risk to the lender generally equates to a lower interest rate for the customer.

Considerations prior to seeking off-farm income

Before the decision is made that off-farm income is necessary or desirable, several questions must be answered:

- Is time available for either spouse to pursue such a commitment? Will the time commitment detract from the farm program?
- Will there be additional costs that must be incurred, i.e., vehicle, child care, etc.?
- If it's an owned, off-farm business, will there be an increase in capital requirements in the future?
- Will there be potential family stress by being away from the farm, possibly even at night?
- Does the off-farm income strengthen your ability to repay debt?

In the proper context, off-farm income can greatly improve a farmer's bottom line, especially for operations grossing under $250,000 per year. While off-farm income will not completely offset the need for borrowed funds, given the capital requirements of many farming operations, it can reduce the risk of financing for both producers and lenders.

Finding Yoders Has Farmer Plowed Under

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

GRANTSVILLE, Md. — Kenneth L. Yoder, whose 250 acre dairy farm flanks the Dorsey Hotel Road, insists he's a farmer. But more often than not, it's Ruth, his wife, and Dwight and Annetta, their two children living at home, who are milking the 68 registered Holsteins in the barn.

That doesn't mean Yoder doesn't do his sharing of plowing, mind you. It's just that he's usually digging into a new project that doesn't call for a tractor or sod for that matter.

His latest undertaking has Yoder on a quest (along with a few committee members), to locate all the Yoders in the world. You see, they're going to build a Yoder House this summer that will eventually contain a history of Yoders back to the fourth century when it all began with St. Yoder.

The house will be built in the Spruce Forest Artisan Village east of here along Route 40, next to the Penn Alps Restaurant and Crafts Shop. Inside will be an archives.

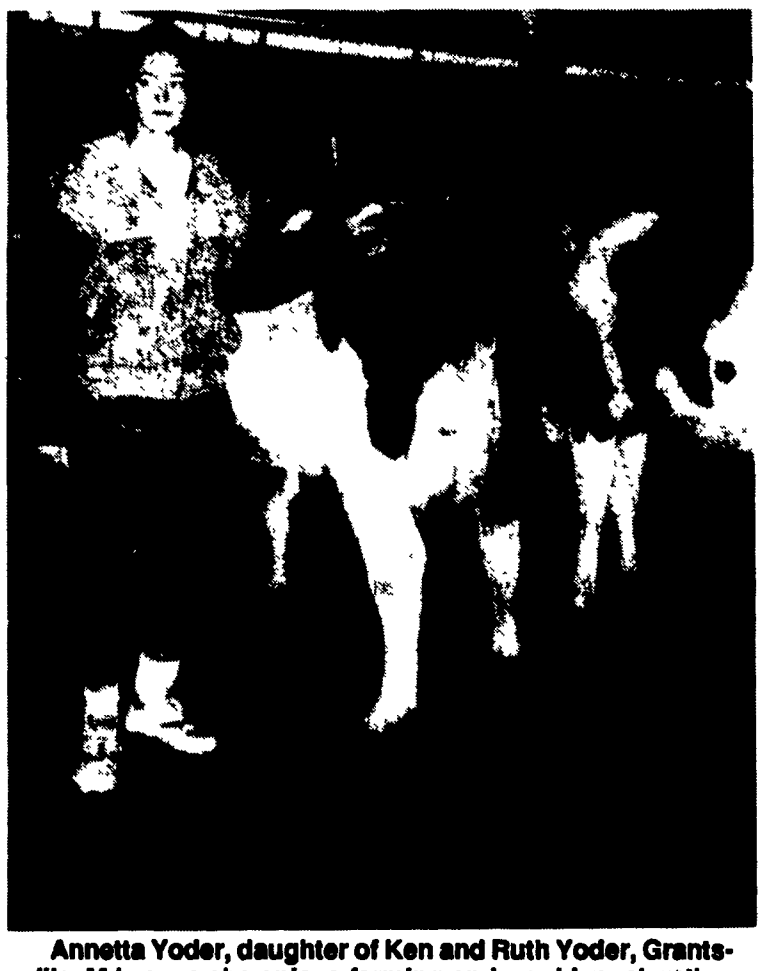
Unique features in it will be the soul window where, it was believed, the spirit flew out once the person died; a Holy corner and walk-in fireplace, and an apartment for the hosts.

Yoder learned to know other Yoders in Europe when in 1955, he joined the Mennonite Central Committee's PAX program in lieu of military service and was sent to Germany. He was to help resettle refugees still homeless from World War II. The place was Espelkamp.

That's where he met Ruth. With her family, she was a refugee, and in the same youth group with Yoder.

He had taken his MCC orientation seriously. He said, "We were told by MCC we weren't to be chasing women." So while he and Ruth chatted on a platonic level, nothing of romance entered the relationship for several years.

Ruth and Ken Yoder are holding two books about Yoders that were given to them by the late Karl Joder from Germany, a researcher.



Annetta Yoder, daughter of Ken and Ruth Yoder, Grantsville, Md., says she enjoys farming and would much rather work outside than inside. She stands with Cringle, one of 68 registered Holsteins in the herd.

Jokingly, he says, "I got to Germany and found the lady who wanted to change her name to Yoder."

The two dated the last six months of his three-plus years in Germany. Communication wasn't too difficult. He spoke Pennsylvania Dutch and knew some high German. She spoke German, was taught English in school but never used it. Then too, she was from a farm family.

Yoder returned to the U.S. for a year before going back and marrying Ruth. It was scary in a way, especially for her mother, when Ruth married and came to the U.S. Still fresh were the vivid memories of Denmark where they had been held in the refugee camp.

"My mother made sure I had enough money in the bank for the back trip," laughs Ruth.

When his dad retired from active farming, Yoder and Ruth moved to the family farm where he had grown up and became the fifth Yoder generation to run it. Both the house and barn were built in 1874, he says.

"I was always interested in disadvantaged people," says Yoder, now an ordained minister. He got the idea to start a housing project in Harrisburg's inner-city. Working independently, he purchased decrepit, old houses to fix up and resell or rent to refugees and recovering alcoholics. The business is Harris Homes.

He made good friendships that crossed racial lines and became lifelong friends with a black pastor and his congregation. They've shared visits.

Such business ventures often take Yoder away from home. He says, "The only way I can do it is because I have a good family." He and Ruth have seven children.

The Yoders have been to Germany and Switzerland several times. One person they met was the late Karl Joder who was researching Yoders since the 1930s and had an ancestral pedigree that covered six meters (probably 18 plus feet). He gave books relating to Yoders to Ken and Ruth. One he'd personally handbound and the other was a secular history from Steffisburg, Switzerland, wherein were the actual signatures of the town council members from 1980.

It was in Steffisburg, that a number of Yoders held prestigious positions such as judges or governors, according to the book.

Yoder is also the secretary-treasurer of the Casselman Valley Amish and Mennonite Historians who celebrated the 250th anniversary of Yoders coming to America from Germany, last year.

That's when all the brainstorming Yoders decided that what they want is one house in which to preserve their long history. And they're after artifacts from houses all over the world to save within the 30- by 40-foot walls. Even the house design they've selected is a pre-1750 style.

Ruth sent a rather accusing look toward her husband, which was meant to remind him that he would be better off without another project. But she already knows he's in over his "waders" and the water keeps on risin' when you're talking Yoder House project.

No wonder Yoder says, "I went out this morning to feed the cows, but by the time I got around, it was already done."

Anyway, folks if you are reading this article, you must be a Yoder yourself. Or maybe a descendent of one. How could you not be, after all, when back in 1987, Yoder listings in the national telephone directory exceeded 8,000.

So, do Ken Yoder a favor and get in touch with the folks here who want to know about your Yoder line. You will be sent as much information about the Yoder House project as you want. You can contribute something by way of an artifact or treasure, information, money, time or suggestions.

Call Esther Yoder at the Spruce Forest Artisan Village: Telephone (301) 895-3332.

The address is The Yoder House Spruce Forest Artisan Village, Route 2, Box 5, Grantsville, MD 21536.

Ken and Ruth Yoder of Grantsville, Md. stand beside the beautiful new sign to their farm. Cornucopia was the name of the original tract of land. SCHOENENBERG means beautiful mountains. Neighbor Dee Spiker painted it.

Homestead Notes

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

I miss the flag.

When our service men and women began shipping out for Desert Storm, Old Glory waved numerous home around our neighborhood.

"Wish we had flag up on top of the silo," I said to our son one day, after he commented on the outpouring of community flag support.

"I'll put one up," he promptly volunteered. And soon after, a flag waved from a sturdy pole he had fastened at the top of the 80-feet-high haylage silo. We all felt good about the flag waving there, our own little way of honoring our military serving around the world.

Desert Storm became part of history. A series of rain and high-wind storms eventually bent the pole and shredded our flag. Our son climbed the silo to retrieve the tattered Stars and Stripes for proper disposal.

I miss that flag. I miss its constant reminder, as it flapped and snapped in the breeze, of the freedoms our brave men and women have gone to war over the centuries to uphold. Freedoms we take for granted, freedoms we abuse, freedoms we have to fight for someday right in our own backyards — or back forty.

With each annual Memorial Day, it seems our freedoms are increasingly threatened — not by totalitarian societies intent on revising the world order — but by ourselves. Our freedom is in danger from over-taxing, over-regulation, over-whelming growth of the bureaucracy and over-burdening the productive segment of society with support of the non-productive.

Freedom, sadly, generates apathy. Far too few voters made the effort to cast their ballot in the recent primary election. But those responsible folks who did seemed to loudly shout "Enough!" to endless government spending.

Among them are farmers whose food-producing fields do not continually add to population growth ('cept for groundhogs!), do not demand additiohnal police, education complexes, transportation facilities, recreational areas, water, sewer or more landfills. Yet, farmland taxes, like all property taxes, continue to rise to pay for services demanded by growing communities.

Farmland preservation is "politically correct" at the moment. It's also a common-sense move to assure land for growing food and not shopping malls for our grandchildren's grandchildren.

Well, maybe. Taxes and regulations, while certainly necessary, pose significant threats to agriculture if they continue in unabated proliferation. What value preservation if a property can't be productive with practicality or affordable to cultivate?

Nutrient management legislation recently passed in Pennsylvania will ultimately regulate how many animals can be maintained on a certain size farm. Now, proposals are being presented that would regulate the use of water for agriculture in the Susquehanna Basin. ("Sorry, Bossy old girl. I know it's 95-degrees out there but you drank your allotment this morning.")

Wetlands, endangered species, pollution, energy, conservation are all controversial issues with long-term impact to agriculture's ability to keep producing cheap and abundant food, a key reason America has remained so prosperous over the centuries.

Certainly, we need guiding legislation in all these areas, administered with common sense. But legislation produces regulations, which produce administering bureaucrats, which produce more legislation which produce more regulations.....and on and on, which taxes rise endlessly to pay. Enough is enough, already.

For Memorial Day, I'd like to put a flag back up to proclaim my beliefs in the freedoms for which this country has always stood. Sometimes, I'm not quite sure I know exactly what they are anymore.

But, thank God still for the freedom to publicly say that. (end)

Choose Work Clothes That Make Sense

Farmers, like others who work outdoors, are at increased risk for skin cancer and other conditions related to overexposure to the sun's harmful rays.

While unnoticeable from one year to the next, over a lifetime, skin damage can become chronic. With the longer work days and more outdoor work spring and summer bring, farm workers need to don appropriate protective clothing.

It's particularly important to keep children's protected from the sun's ultraviolet rays. Since most of an individuals' lifetime exposure occurs before the age of 18, taking small precautions now can help to prevent serious health problems in the future.

Many agricultural workers wear a baseball-style cap to shield their eyes, leaving the back of the neck and ears exposed. A better cap design for sun protection has a panel around the back to protect the neck and ears from sun damage. A wide-brimmed straw hat also offers good protection. Many styles are available to suit your personal taste and work needs.

It may be tempting, particularly for young men, to go shirtless while working in the sun and heat. But keep your shirt on. It will protect your skin from sunburn, flying debris, scratches and insect stings. Choose clothing that is loose fitting but without extra material which may get caught in machinery or snagged on tree limbs.

Wear sunscreen on exposed areas such as the face and forearms. To be effective, the sunscreen should be applied about 30 minutes before you go out. Even on hazy days, enough ultraviolet radiation can reach you to cause skin damage if you're not protected.

Jennifer Grimes Becomes Berks County Dairy Princess

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Dairy Farmers welcomed Jennifer Grimes as their 1993 Dairy Princess at the annual pageant Saturday, May 15. Jennifer, daughter of Kenneth and Barbara Grimes of Strausstown, was crowned by outgoing Princess Sandy Gross. Serving as alternates for the coming year will be Karen Davis, daughter of Arlan and Deborah Davis, Bernville, and Lynne Koinski, daughter of John and Dorothy Koinski, Mohrsville.

Four-year-old Justine Stoltzfus was chosen as the Li'l Miss. She is the daughter of Glenn and Gail Stoltzfus, Pennwood Dairy Farm, Morgantown.

As part of the Dairy Princess competition, Jennifer presented her milk promotion skit for the audience. She spoke as a representative of The La Moo Modeling School in search of models who need the healthy benefits of milk and dairy products. She answered the impromptu question: What is the most important problem facing Pennsylvania's Dairy Farmers and what can you as Dairy Princess do to solve it? Jennifer said the worst problem is milk's competition with non-dairy drinks and sodas. She believes that the personal approach to consumers is a great asset and consumers will remember a live person rather than printed advertisements.

Outgoing Princess Sandy Gross gave a slide presentation highlighting her reign. The Berks County Dairy Princess Promotion Committee recognized the nine Dairy Ambassadors who assisted at events throughout the past year.

Li'l Miss Justine Stoltzfus is the daughter of Glenn and Gail Stoltzfus of Morgantown.

Berks County Dairy Princess Jennifer Grimes, center, alternates Karen Davis, left, and Lynne Koinski, are ready to promote the dairy industry in Berks County. Li'l Miss Justine Stoltzfus will help.

Women In Farming

The farmer's traditional image is of a man planting the crop, operating a tractor or herding the livestock.

But more than 130,000 of the 2.1 million U.S. farms have a woman in charge. The last U.S. agriculture census found that women farm operators had increased by more than 10,000 in five years — at a time when the overall number of farms was declining.

And women play a major role in managing many of the other family-business-style farms that dominate agriculture in the United States.

Most U.S. farm businesses, large and small, are family-owned and operated, whether they are sole proprietor, partnership or incorporated. On many of these family farms, women co-manage the family business. Farm women are often in charge of entire portions of the family farm business such as all livestock operations, or all cash crop marketing, or all financial records analysis.

Women spend thousands of hours as tractor and farm machine operators and thousands of dollars as purchasing decision-makers on today's farms. Women's roles on farms have changed so much that farm machinery manufacturers do detailed research to find out what women want in farm machine performance and operator controls.

Visibility Of Farm Equipment On Roads

Thousands of roadway accidents involving farm equipment occur each year, causing many injuries, scores of deaths and considerable property damage. If you drive farm equipment on public roads, make sure it is properly lighted and marked so other road users can see and identify it as slow-moving in time to avoid collision.

• Make sure your farm equipment has the lighting, reflectors and slow vehicle identification recommended by the manufacturer and required by law in your area.

• Keep lights and reflectors clean. Replace burned-out bulbs and lamps promptly. Make sure slow-moving vehicle emblems are clean, bright and readily visible from the rear. Replace or reface faded emblems.

• Use your flashing lights when you travel on a public road. If you have turn signals, indicate your intent to turn well in advance.

• If possible, avoid travel during bad weather and at night. Also, avoid busy highways during peak travel or rush hours. Use your lights on gloomy or rainy days.

• If possible, move wide equipment during the day and when traffic volume is relatively low. Use all lights. If you transport equipment on a flatbed, make sure to comply with local and state highway regulations.

• Use an escort car or a lookout to help you on blind curves or bridges.

• Obey all traffic laws.

• Be courteous to other drivers.

• Avoid sudden, unexpected maneuvers, swerves, stops or turns.

• When you are driving a car or light truck and see a farm vehicle, slow down and prepare to stop. Before you pass, check for oncoming traffic and to the rear.

Memorial Day Cook-Out

Cooking outdoors is an American tradition on Memorial Day. Cooking out-of-doors is more fun than being cooped up in the kitchen, and willing hands to help are more easily found. It doesn't matter if the grill is on a patio or porch, deck, balcony or fire-escape. Delightful odors fill the air, appetites freshen, and eating takes on a festive flair.

LEMON BARBECUED CHICKEN

2 broiler-fryer chickens, halved
1 cup salad oil
½ cup fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons onion powder
2 teaspoons sweet basil, crushed
½ teaspoon thyme, crushed
½ teaspoon garlic salt

Place chicken in shallow glass baking dish. In jar with lid, mix together salad oil, lemon juice, salt, paprika, onion powder, basil, thyme and garlic powder. Shake well to blend; pour over chicken, cover with plastic wrap and marinate in the refrigerator 6 to 8 hours or overnight, turning chicken occasionally. Place chicken on prepared grill, skin side up; brush with marinade. Grill about 30 minutes, brushing often with marinade. Turn chicken and repeat brushing until chicken is golden brown and cooked through. Makes 4 servings.

National Broiler Council

GRILLED FRESH HAM

4-5 pound boneless fresh ham
¾ cup chili sauce
¼ cup red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 clove garlic, minced

Prepare covered grill with drip pan in center, banked with medium-hot coals. Place ham in center of grill. Grill over slow coals until meat thermometer registers 165 degrees about 2-2½ hours. Mix remaining ingredients; brush ham frequently with sauce during the last hour of grilling time. Let ham stand at least 10 minutes before carving.

National Pork Producers Council

Refrigerate 4 to 6 hours or overnight, turning chicken occasionally. Drain chicken, reserving marinade. Place chicken on prepared grill, skin side up, about 8 inches from heat, and grill, turning, about 30 minutes. Stir molasses into reserved marinade and use to baste chicken during last 10 minutes of cooking. Makes 4 servings.

3 medium tomatoes, peeled, seeded, diced
1 red or yellow bell pepper, seeded, diced
2 tablespoons finely chopped red onion

Think Healthy, Think Barley!

The United States Department of Agriculture's Food Guide Pyramid zeros in on grain products as a key food group for healthy eating. It recommends that we consume 6 to 11 servings of foods from this category each day.

If you are searching for a different grain to try, try barley! Barley makes a natural choice because of its many nutritional benefits. This wholesome grain is loaded with carbohydrates, contains very little fat, and is cholesterol free. And like other grains, barley is a rich source of soluble and insoluble dietary fiber.

Laboratory studies show that insoluble fiber can be extremely effective in maintaining regular intestinal function which helps reduce the incidence of certain types of cancer such as colon cancer. Other research shows that soluble fiber can help lower blood cholesterol levels and reduce the risk of heart disease.

Barley, in its natural state, consists of a kernel that is enclosed in a tough hull. When the kernel is removed, the kernel is polished (pearled). Pearl barley may be found in the rice and noodle aisle of your supermarket.

When preparing pearl barley, here's a good rule of thumb: One cup of raw pearl barley yields about 3-1/2 cups cooked barley.

Barley is also available in flour, flakes and grits in health food stores and in some supermarkets. Barley is also used as an ingredient in many prepared food products such as breakfast cereals, soups, pilaf mixes, breads, cookies, crackers and snack bars.

Here is a recipe for making your own Barley Pilaf Mix rather than buying it in the supermarket. To cut down on preparation time, assemble this flavorful pilaf mix in advance and store in a zip-top plastic bag in a cool, dry place. Be sure to attach a card with the cooking directions to the bag.

HERBED BARLEY PILAF MIX

¾ cup pearl barley
2 chicken or beef bouillon cubes or 2 teaspoons instant granular bouillon
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
1 tablespoon dry parsley flakes
½ teaspoon dry basil leaves
½ teaspoon dry oregano leaves
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Place barley in plastic bag. Combine remaining ingredients for seasoning and place in a smaller sandwich; seal and place in plastic bag with barley. Seal bag and attach directions for preparation. Store mix in a cool, dry place until ready to use.

STOVE TOP DIRECTIONS: Place barley and contents of seasoning packet in medium-size saucepan. Add 2 cups water and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Bring to a boil; reduce heat to low, cover and cook 45 minutes or until barley is tender and liquid is absorbed. Makes 4 servings.

MICROWAVE DIRECTIONS: In a 2-quart casserole, combine barley, seasoning, 2 cups water and 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Cover and cook on HIGH 6 to 8 minutes or until mixture comes to a boil. Stir with fork. Cover and continue to cook on HIGH 15 to 18 minutes or until most of the liquid is absorbed and barley is tender. Let stand, covered, 5 to 6 minutes.

PSU Extension Aids Poland Struggle

SMETHPORT (McClean Co.) —Jim Clark, Penn State Cooperative Extension Agent in McKean and Potter Counties has been living and working in Olecko, Poland since January 1993. He is a part of a six-month Polish-American Extension Project organized to strengthen the Polish extension system and assist Polish farmers in understanding farming in a free market economy. The project is a cooperative effort between the United States Department of Agriculture, Polish Ministry of Agriculture and Food Economy, and Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences.

The news of Clark's work in the Northeast corner of Poland spread to the neighboring country of Lithuania, a former Soviet Republic, and Clark was invited to visit and make a presentation to Lithuanian farmers. Clark stated it was the most exciting moment in his career. Polish farmers have had experience with private farming during communism, but Lithuanian farmers have had no experience with private farming or an agricultural extension system since 1946. Clark was able to visit and speak with the first private Lithuanian farmer in the Svencionai region of Lithuania on May 14. In a two-hour lecture presented to 30 farmers, he was also able to explain the United States Extension system and stressed the importance of the farmers working together to solve common problems.

Clark will return to Smethport in McKean County on July 9 and hopes to share his experiences in Poland and Lithuania with Pennsylvania residents.

ATTENTION — A few weeks ago we printed recipes from our readers for Easter candy. Some of these called for parrafin. Thanks to Nancy Fasolt who wrote that paraffin is not considered a healthy ingredient to be consumed or used in candy making. The use of paraffin has been illegal in the candy industry for many years. Before the development of today's chocolate coatings, the unsweetened baking chocolate was all that was available to the home candy maker. Paraffin was added so the chocolate would harden and stay on the coated item.

Today, the home candy maker has the availability of real milk chocolate (which needs to be tempered) and confectionery coatings, also known as summer coatings or compound coatings that only need be melted and used. Nothing else need be added; the result is a professional product. These chocolate coatings can be purchased where candy making supplies are sold such as the Cake and Kandy Emporium, Village Common, 2019 Miller Rd., East Petersburg.

Here is one of Nancy's recipes, which can be used for peanut butter eggs or cups.

Peanut Butter Cups

1 pound confectioners' sugar
1 stick butter, softened

18-ounce jar peanut butter. Knead all ingredients until well blended. The consistency will vary with the brand of peanut butter — for creamier consistency, add more peanut butter. For a firmer consistency, add more confectioners' sugar. Dip into melted confectionery coating.

18-ounce package yellow cake mix

Cut rhubarb into ½ -inch slices and place in greased 9x13-inch pan. Sprinkle with gelatin and sugar. Place marshmallows over mixture.

Prepare cake mix as directed. Pour over rhubarb mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes. Remove from oven and turn upside down on serving tray. Serve warm with whipped cream. Serves 8 to 12.

ANSWER — Maureen Wheeler, Kirkwood, wanted a lemon pudding cake recipe. Thanks to Lois Delp, Dimock, for sending a recipe.

Lemon Glaze Cake

1package yellow cake mix
1 package lemon Jell-O
4 eggs
¾ cup vegetable oil
¾ cup water
1½ cups confectioners' sugar

Beat together for 4 minutes or until fluffy. Bake at 350 degrees in a 9x13-inch pan for 35 minutes.

While cake is baking, mix juice of 3 lemons with 1½ cups confectioners' sugar. When cake is finished baking, punch holes with a fork over the top of cake and spread on the glaze while the cake is still hot. The glaze partially soaks into the cake and leaves a thin glaze on top.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Soon we hope to harvest some of the crops that we have been working on this spring. The peas and strawberries are ready to be picked and frozen. Of course, we'll eat a lot of them fresh from the garden.

When I'm outside planting bulbs, I see and hear a tiny Jenny Wren as it works to build a nest in the birdhouse. Another bird has moved into the bluebird house but I cannot give it a name. Although, it looks like the Vireo pictured in my birdbook.

Many of my neighbors, who take walks past our home, have commented on my iris bed with 100 plants that I transplanted last August. Not all of them bloomed this year but I'm hoping that next year will be a full display of their beauty.

I have just marked some 50 photos that I took with my camera. Half of these will be sent to our children. Many years ago my aunt and grandfather shared the price of my first small box camera. It cost two or three dollars if I remember correctly. Since then I've had two or three other more expensive ones.

My camel-back trunk is full of family pictures from many generations. Most of them are marked and I've been able to share some negatives with people who were publishing historical books. One book gave a two page spread to a picture of my father's 1923 Overland car and our family on a trip to Maryland for fish. It was a custom to get our year's supply of fish on Ascension Day.

It seems that in the 1800s pictures were often taken of the homestead with family members standing in the foreground. These are quite interesting!

Rollover Protective Structure Information Available

By now you know that of all farm accidents, tractor rollovers are the single greatest cause of death. Half of those deaths could have been prevented if the tractor had been equipped with a rollover protective structure, or ROPS.

Agricultural safety experts agree that no matter how careful or experienced an operator may be, nothing can protect him or her from death in a rollover tractor accident better than a properly designed and installed ROPS and a seatbelt.

Federal and industry standards ensure that all new tractors sold in the United States have a ROPS, but of the 4.5 million tractors currently in use, only 1.3 million are equipped with the life saving structures.

A safe ROPS cannot simply be rigged in the farm shop. Your life is worth much more than the money or time you might save by cutting corners on such an essential piece of protection. Are you still operating an unsafe tractor because you just can't find the information you need on the availability of a ROPS for your equipment?

To help farmers find that information, the Wisconsin Rural Health Research Center has published an updated version of the Guide to Tractor Roll Bars and Other Rollover Protective Structures. The directory offers a comprehensive listing of ROPS and tractor manufacturers, ordering procedures, ROPS types available for specific tractor makes and models and suggested prices.

To get a copy of the guide, contact The Wisconsin Rural Health Research Center, 1000 North Oak Avenue, Marshfield, WI 54449-5790.

Lots Of Animals Make Life Fun

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — Ashley, Whitney, and Grant Meyers love animals. Like many farm children, they have calves, dogs and chickens, but some rather unusual animals live at Tidy-Brook Farm also. Chukars (wild partridges) live in a pen in the yard. And there have even been ducklings swimming in the bathtub!

That came about like this: The children's father, Alan, accidently destroyed the cover of a duck nest while he was making hay. (The mother duck won't return to her nest if the cover is ruined.) He brought the eggs into the house and put them under a heat lamp in the kitchen. Every day, the children sprinkled water on them and turned them, just as the mother duck would have, and they hatched! When the ducklings were a couple days old, the children put them in the bathtub so they could swim. After that, they were kept in the barn until they were old enough to fend for themselves. Then the family set them free in a nature preserve that has a large pond. They mingled right in with the other ducks.

Grant, 2½, loves the chukars. "He thinks they're special," his mother, Kendra, said. His great-uncle gave them to the family after he had hatched them out in an incubator.

Grant brings in the chukar's daily egg. The eggs must be kept at room temperature for several days before being incubated, so they are stored in the cellar and the girls turn them every day. Then their great-uncle will put them in his incubator.

Ashley and Whitney feed the calves from the dairy operation that their parents and grandfather, Mark Meyers, run.

The dogs, Taffy and Tootsie, are an important part of the farm. They are Jack Russell terriers, and are ferocious when it comes to killing groundhogs. The rest of the time, they are gentle family pets. They stay close to the farmhouse most of the time. If the children go to their grandmother's house nearby, Taffy and Tootsie follow and stay outside her door until the children go home.

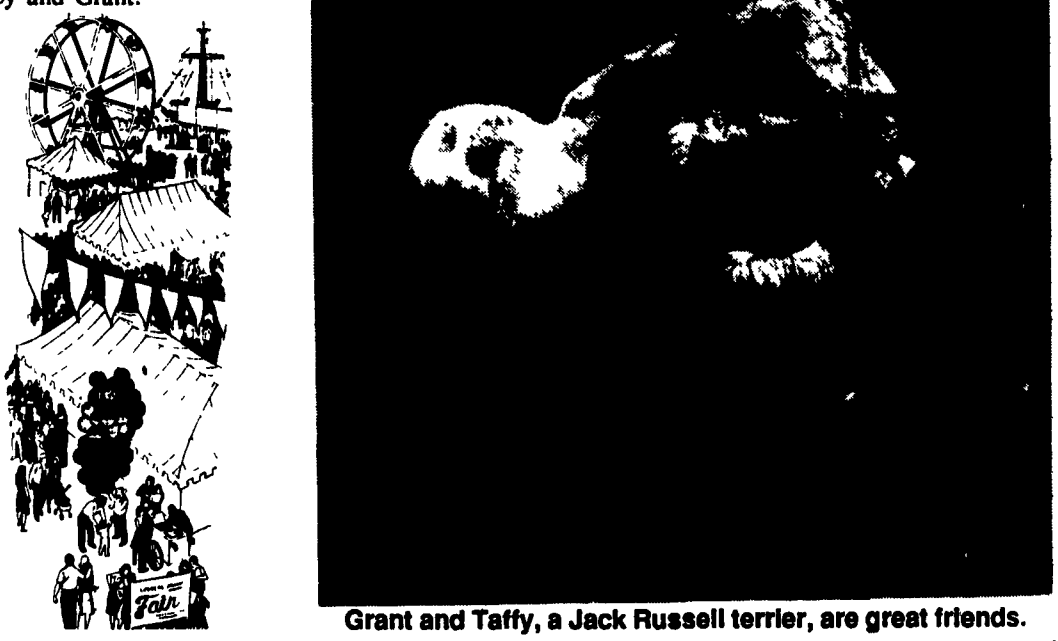
Ashley, 7, collects bugs. Last fall, she found three cocoons and kept them in a container all winter. (Her mother found them in the garage and wanted her to throw them away, but she didn't.) This spring, butterflies came out of the cocoons and laid some eggs in the container. Ashley took them to school to show to her first-grade class at Shalom Christian Academy.

Whitney, 5, along with her sister, feeds, waters and gathers the eggs from the family's flock of 12 chickens. She is very excited about entering kindergarten this fall. Some of the preparations have already been made — she passed her kindergarten test and "I got my shots!" she announced.

One activity that Ashley, Whitney and Grant enjoy together is the "train" their grandfather made for them. He made it from apple juice concentrate tubs after seeing a photo of one in a magazine. The train, which has padded seats, is pulled by the 4-wheeler.

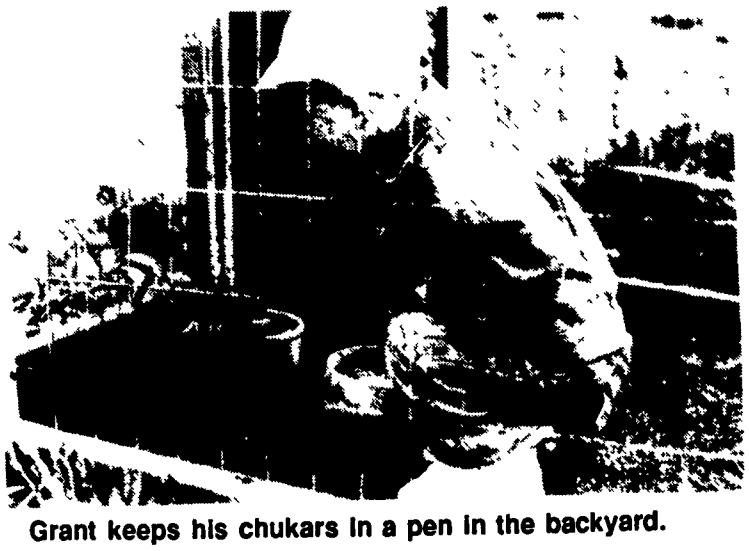
Having lots of animals around makes life a lot of fun for Ashley, Whitney and Grant!

A favorite activity for Grant, Ashley and Whitney is taking a ride on the "train" their grandfather made for them. Here, their father is the "engineer."



Grant and Taffy, a Jack Russell terrier, are great friends.

Ashley, Whitney and Grant love to feed the calves!



Grant keeps his chukars in a pen in the backyard.

Fourth grader Sarah Westley of Hamburg took this picture. It shows Dennis Bower, right, head teacher at upper Bern Elementary School, explaining how mules were used for farming during the pre-Revolutionary period. Sarah's class spent a year learning about the history of Shartlesville. Bob Adam's, left, a sixth grade teacher, keeps an eye on the mules.

EAST PETERSBURG (Lancaster Co.) — "Flowers so real, you can't distinguish it from a fresh flower" is the way some people describe gum paste flowers.

Gum paste flowers are used in upscale cake decorating. Gum paste is a medium of vegetable gums which, when exposed to air, becomes very hard and resembles porcelain. Each petal is hand formed and constructed petal by petal and then accented with color.

Gloria Griffin from Toronto, Ontario, Cananada is coming to the Cake and Kandy Emporium (CAKE) in East Petersburg to teach a class on gum paste flowers. The two-day class will be held Saturday and Sunday, June 12 and 13, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuition is $135. Register by calling CAKE at (717) 569-5728.

Gum paste flowers are difficult to distinguish from fresh flowers.

Therapeutic Riding More Than A Pony Ride

University Park (Centre Co.) — Some of the newest 4-H animal programs involve more than raising farm animals for show. Therapeutic riding programs use horses to help people with disabilities gain muscle strength and coordination, independence and self-esteem.

"Therapeutic riding is more than just a pony ride," says Ben Nolt, coordinator of 4-H therapeutic riding at Penn State. "Horses can help people who are physically and emotionally impaired achieve their personal best. As people walk, their bodies move back and forth, side to side and up and down. The horse's gait almost exactly simulates that motion, recreating the sensation of walking in the rider who is physically disabled.

This helps riders become more aware of how their body muscles operate, and the warmth of the horse helps stiff muscles relax. Learning to stay in the saddle and control the horse helps riders develop arm and leg control. The riders learn to breathe deeply and steadily, improving cardiovascular functions.

Riding has psychological benefits too. Picture a child who may get belittled at school or around the neighborhood for looking or acting "funny," or an adult who always has to look up from a wheelchair to catch other people's eyes.

"But people astride horses and suddenly they're taller than everyone else," says Nolt. "What a boost! For once in their lives, they're in the driver's seat. Their range of vision increases. They're no longer passive spectators, but active participants.

After riders get medical consent to participate, a physical therapist evaluates their abilities and designs a course of exercises. Riders may perform exercises that help improve their balance and coordination, such as riding their horses while balancing bean bags on their heads.

Some participants do not actually ride moving horses, but perform stretching exercises on stationary animals. The youngest participant in Pennsylvania, a nine-month-old baby diagnosed with developmental problems, simply lies prone on the horse, rocking back and forth to experience movement.

Putting an infant on a 1,000-pound horse may seem risky. But safety, a key concern in any riding program, is paramount in therapeutic riding. "Horses are carefully selected for docile temperament," says Robert Kessler, an extension agent who facilitates the program in Franklin County.

Pennsylvania is a leader in the therapeutic riding movement, with nearly 70 programs in place — more than in any other state. Programs are monitored by the Pennsylvania Council on Horseback Riding for the Handicapped, which is supported by Pennsylvania 4-H and the Pennsylvania Easter Seal Society. For more information on therapeutic riding in Pennsylvania, contact Ben Nolt at (814) 863-3824.

Farms Are For Families To Share

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — "Farms are for families and I want to share ours," Ruth Martin said.

For 31 years, she and her husband Lloyd have opened their arms and their farm to Fresh Air children from New York City.

The delight that shines from the eyes of these children when they bottle feed a calf, help dig potatoes, and pedal bicycle on the Martin's paved driveway, is reward enough for Ruth.

"Seeing them learn is so fulfilling," she said. "They need to learn the simpliest things — that a watermelon must ripen before you pick it — that seeds must be planted before beans grow — and that lying and stealing are not necessary."

Many families are hesitant to host fresh air children because of potential problems. That doesn't stop the Martin family.

"Sure, there are problems. You can't outline the problems ahead of time because each child is different. But the solution is to find a workable answer. You face the problems when they arise. Be firm. It always works out," she said.

Her philosophy for living is "A person who has faith to move mountains must first move little hills."

In her years of caring for Fresh Air children, Ruth has had plenty of opportunities to move "little hills" and even mountains.

One time, a boy arrived in their home only two days after he had witnessed someone being murdered in an elevator. The first two days, he would lean against the wall and cry from the awful memory. Ruth's heart ached for him. In a few days, he bubbled with happiness.

He summed up his transformation by saying, "I feel better since you told me that you love me and God loves me, too."

The Martins hosted Fresh Air children before they had any of their own. Now, their family includes Kathy, 24; Tim, 21; Ann, 17; John, 15; and Mike, 12. The children are so enthusiastic about the program that one daughter vows, "When I get married, I will have three or four Fresh Air children at the same time."

Several times, the Martins did host siblings together. "But we found it worked better to have them at different times," Ruth said. "They seemed to argue more or the older one would boss the younger one."

In the first years of the program, the Martins also had Fresh Air children return to the farm for a week during Christmas vacation. In fact, two weeks before the Martins' first child was born, they had two children for a week. It snowed and the children were constantly in and out of the house.

"The kitchen floor was a mess from all the tracked-in snow," Ruth said. "I decided not to wash it on Saturday because I knew that it would get just as dirty the next day."

When Ruth took the children to the train terminal on Monday and returned home, she was pleasantly surprised to find her husband had washed the floor.

"He hadn't done it before and he hasn't done it since," Ruth said.

Ruth still uses a wringer washer to do the laundry. "Every child likes to help with that, but I really need to keep a close eye on them at all times," she said.

Boys especially, the Martins find, need to be watched closely.

At first, the Martins were hesitant to take boys on the farm because there are so many ways they could get hurt. Ruth said that they found boys must be constantly watched because they are more daring, "but they just love the farm and it's so rewarding to see how much they enjoy it."

Since the Martins have older children, it makes it easier to keep a closer tab on the activities of the Fresh Air children.

The Martins milk 49 cows on their 72-acre farm, and have rabbits, cats, and a Dalmatian dog. At one time, they also had pigs — a real favorite with Fresh Air children.

The different lifestyles become evident in everyday living. Only two of the children in the 31 years the Martins have kept them have grown up with a father living in the home. Eating habits are different. One child absolutely insisted that potato chips needed to be bought from the store each day because her family always threw away leftovers instead of tightly closing the bag to preserve them.

While the children like corn on the cob and watermelons from the garden, they are accustomed to different meals than farm families.

Ruth adapts by serving lots of spaghetti and homemade pizza during the child's stay so much so that her husband once remarked, "That's enough spaghetti to last until next July."

Farm families usually go to bed early, but it's difficult to get city children to do so. They like to sleep late in the morning. Ruth said that she lets each one sleep as long as desired because it is easier to have a happy child. But that doesn't mean that she is lax in discipline otherwise. The children are given chores just like her own.

"Some children sulk a little and complain that they don't need to wash dishes at home, but I don't back down," Ruth said.

She finds that it works best to get children as young as possible then they cooperate better each year they return because the children know ahead of time what is expected of them.

While most Fresh Air children are poor writers, Ruth said, many do send pictures from time to time, and as they grow up and marry, ask the Martins to host their grandchildren.

Lloyd takes advantages of teaching the children that there is another way of life other than depending on free handouts. When children say, "Look at all this free food you get from the farm," Lloyd tells them, "It isn't free. I bought the farm, I pay taxes, and I planted the seed."

Ruth used to wave aside his explanations with the words, "Oh, they're too little to understand." Now, she believes that children grasp a lot of things that make sense later in life. She thinks it's valuable for them to learn how food is grown and processed.

Fresh Air children are often amazed that the Martins "live in this big house all by yourself."

Some people don't want to host Fresh Air children because they don't have enough space or believe the house isn't furnished very well, but Ruth said, "These children are not use to luxuries. They never complain."

While she does not want to miminize the problems and inconveniences of hosting a Fresh Air child, Ruth wants to encourage

Indiana County 4-H

Three Indiana County 4-H clubs have been named recipients of grants from the National 4-H Council. The Indiana County Clubs are the only groups from Pennsylvania to receive funding.

The Marion Center Handy Helpers Sewing Club won a $1,000 grant from the Metropolitan Life Foundation for a "Youth in Action/Community Service Grant Promotion." This grant requires the club youth leadership to provide the idea and major planning for the community service program.

Club President Jessica Griffith coordinated the grant with assistance from leaders Leanne Griffith, Anne Shannon, and Sandy McFarland. Club members plan to make handmade clothing and toys to donate to two local hospitals. The club will invite and organize other groups in this effort. Thirty-eight grants from $100 to $1,000 were awarded to clubs from 30 states.

The Sugar & Spice 4-H Club has received a grant from the Dr. Scholl Foundation in the "Handicapped Youth Initiatives Grants." Awards were given to 14 groups from 11 states. The Indiana County Club received $300 to assist in providing 4-H programming to 50 handicapped youth that attend Camp Sunrise. Club members will provide workshops in such areas as nutrition, crafts, and plant science. They will also plan and organize several holiday activities for the campers. Club leaders are Sue Glass and Laurie Zack.

The Gordon 4-H Club will conduct pork promotion activities with a grant received from Bob Evans Farms, Inc. and Owens Country Sausage. Pork promotion grants from $500 to $3,000 were awarded to 10 groups in nine states.

The local club has received $975 to plan and conduct a swine and pork awareness program for 500 grade school students in four area districts. Club members will develop a curriculum to teach students about pork as a food, how swine grow, parts of a hog, and materials produced from swine. Club leaders are Frank and Sue Glass and Pete and Jeremy Cattau.

Filling A Silo Is Dangerous Job

Few farm operations are as dangerous as filling a silo. This complex task combines raising heavy equipment and working in close quarters with powered machinery, loud noise and deadly silo gases.

It sounds like a potential disaster, but knowing how to handle these hazards will let you fill your silo safely.

Preparation for silo filling includes raising the unloader to the top of the structure. Do this on a calm, dry day to reduce the risk of slips and falls. Make sure all cables, wires, pulleys and connections are anchored and working properly before you start.

One person at ground level should raise the unloader. Another person should watch from the blower pipe platform, signaling if problems arise. Never enter the silo while the unloader is being raised or try to crawl out onto it after it is suspended. An unloader can easily crush you if it falls.

Moving machine parts pose the greatest risk during silo filling. Both self-unloading forage wagons and silo blowers are operated by power takeoff (PTO) shafts that often aren't properly guarded.

A PTO rotates at 9 or 16 times per second at full speed. No one can react fast enough to pull away once caught in the revolving shaft. Stepping over PTO shafts makes accidents much more likely. Walk around tractors and wagons instead.

Unloading wagons have a combination of moving aprons, beaters, conveyors or augers and an assortment of chains and sprockets. To prevent getting snagged keep all protective machinery shields in place, wear comfortable but close-fitting clothing and keep long hair tied up or under a hat.

Never enter a self-unloading wagon or reach into an unloading chute to speed the unloading rate while the machine is running. If it gets clogged, disengage the PTO and stop the tractor. PTO's can accidently slip into gear, so always stop the engine. Keep the unloading wagon's emergency shut-off device in good working condition. It could save your life.

As forage moves from the wagon into the silo blower hopper, it's carried by an auger or conveyor to the blower fan, which forces it into the silo. Silo blower operators need to watch out for the PTO shaft, the exposed conveyor or auger and the blower fan blades.

Blower accidents are most likely when the machine plugs up. If this happens, don't climb onto the hopper or try to force forage into the blower blades. Turn off the blower, cut the power and make sure the fan blades have stopped turning before you try to clear the machine.

Also be sure to securely fasten the silo blower to the tractor drawbar. Otherwise, the PTO could separate or vibrations could make the blower pipe fall.

Machinery is not the only danger associated with silo filling. Silo gases can cause unconsciousness, injury and even death, especially in the first 48 to 60 hours after filling. If you must enter the silo during this time, wear a self-contained breathing apparatus. If you don't have one, stay out of the silo.

Dangerous levels of silo gas may persist for two to three weeks after filling. Before entering without a self-contained breathing apparatus, use the blower to ventilate the silo. Open all doors, run the blower fan for 20 minutes and leave it running while you're in the silo. Enter only after you have put on a respirator for toxic dust and have a second person standing by to assist in an emergency.

Silo blowers, unloading wagons and the tractors that power them are loud enough to cause noise-induced hearing loss. When all of these machines are operated together, the hazard increases. Workers should wear hearing protection.

Children often think silo-filling time is fun, without knowing the danger. They may want to climb on wagons and tractors or help.

Sullivan County Plans Twilight Gathering At Rouse Farms

DUSHORE (Sullivan Co.) — Sullivan County will hold its annual Open House Twilight Gathering at Rouse Farms, the home of reigning Sullivan County Dairy Princess Raylene Rouse of Dushore. The Twilight gathering is scheduled for June 12 at 8 p.m.

The theme "Milk is the Winning Ticket," will be promoted during June Dairy Month in other activities such as the annual Dushore Fire Company parade on June 18, in Dushore at 7 p.m.

Crowning of the new dairy princess will take place during the big June Dairy Month Parade on Saturday, June 19, at 7 p.m. in downtown Dushore.

In preparation for the coronation, the Sullivan County Dairy Promotion Committee held a Milk Tea recently for prospective contestants. Betty Reibson explained the purpose of the dairy princess program and Dairy Princess Raylene Rouse reported on her duties during the past year.

Rose Bush Care

RUTGERS, N.J. — Late March and early April is the time to prune and fertilize bush roses to promote attractive, vigorous plants and flowers. First, remove dead wood, diseased or broken branches, and weak stems (thinner than the thickness of a pencil). If you wait to prune until leaf buds begin to swell, there will be no question as to what is dead or alive on the plant. All pruning cuts should be made either to the ground or to a strong, outward facing bud. Don't leave long stubs; they are prime entry points for disease.

Hybrid tea varieties should then be pruned to a height of 1 to 2 feet. Floribunda roses should be pruned back only lightly after debris removal, although overgrown plants can be cut back drastically. Climbing roses can be thinned now by cutting some canes to the base, but leave top pruning until after flowering.

If recommendations based on soil tests are not available, apply a 5-10-10 or 5-10-5 fertilizer now. Use 2 pounds for 100 square feet of bed or a generous heaping tablespoon per plant, spreading it around the plants and lightly scratching it into the soil surface. A second application of half this amount should be made in mid-June.

This is probably also a good time to be sure you have disease and insect control products available. Roses seem to host more than their fair share of diseases and pests and usually require weekly treatments starting in mid-May to produce high quality roses. Black spot, a fungus disease, is very common and because it causes premature leaf drop, weakens plants if not controlled. A product combining insecticide, miticide and fungicide is probably the easiest approach to keeping problems under control.

Pet Therapy Promotes Intergenerational Exchange

CLAIRE McCABE

NEWARK, Del. — Cuddly kittens and playful pups are two clearly irresistible creatures. A collaborative project of the Westville 4-H club and the American Red Cross and SPCA of Kent County draws on the special magic of these animals to bring out the best in young and old.

Every third Saturday during the school year, club members round up a group of puppies and kittens at the SPCA. Armed with a clean-up kit for inevitable accidents, the children and animals pile into a Red Cross vehicle and head to the Dover Nursing Center. There, they make the rounds of the center, bringing the pleasure of pets, people and conversation to the residents.

The pet therapy project was initiated last fall by 4-H club leader Dana Sharpe. 4-H, the youth-education branch of Cooperative Extension, encourages community service activities. With more than 35 club members, the Westville had plenty of young volunteers.

"We always have more kids volunteer than we can take," says Sharpe. "So many children wanted to be involved in the project when it started that we had to have a lottery. We drew the names of two younger and two older kids for each visit. We hope that by the end of this school year every member will have had a chance to visit the center."

The pets stimulate residents to talk about animals they used to own, easing the way into conversation with the 4-H'ers. The children and pets usually stay for about an hour. But the smiles and attention shared between residents and 4-H'ers impart a warmth that lasts beyond the visit.

The 4-H'ers reap the benefits of interaction with another generation and the rewards of community service.

Lindsay Gooden sums up the reason for her repeat visits to the center, "I like going to see the people smile. They like the animals."

No doubt they like the children, too.

Cleaning Tips From Miss Priss

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Is cleaning a frustrating, time consuming job in your home?

If so, you definitely need the advice of Miss Priss, a cleaning expert. Although she runs a cleaning business, she does not want more cleaning jobs. What she does want to do is to share professional tips to make your job easier.

Miss Priss, who is really Priscilla Hodecker of Lititz, and her husband Terry have two sons and two daughters, ranging in ages from 17 to 25.

"I love to clean," she said. She believes that you, too, will murmur those words if you follow her cleaning advice. "When you have order, you feel better," she said. "People do not realize how much work they make for themselves because they allow clutter to accumulate."

Dejunk

"Many people have an overweight house. If they thin it out, they feel better," she said.

To make cleaning easier, it is necessary to de-junk. Miss Priss suggests that you set aside a day to dejunk. Sort through stacks and drawers and dispose of items in one of four boxes labeled: junk, charity, sort, and emotional withdrawal. The emotional withdrawal box is for items that you don't need but really cannot part with at that time. Put the items in a box, stack it in a closet, and six months later throw it away without looking in the box.

"It's a constant effort to keep your home free of clutter," Miss Priss said. "Keep your eyes open to getting rid of clutter before it is overwhelming. Pitch junk mail the day that it arrives."

A house with basic order is more inviting than a house in disarray. Extra touches such as fresh cut flowers and the aroma of something baking in the oven makes the home seem more appealing.

Windows

If you're perplexed trying to decipher what really is the best window cleaner to use, your problems are over. Throw them all away and get a bucket of plain water, add a drop of dishwashing detergent. Dip a sponge lightly into the water solution and quickly wipe across window area, just enough to wet glass. Take a squeegee blade, tilt the squeegee with the bottom away from the glass and pull across top and then from top to bottom and across bottom of window. Presto! A sparkling window without streaks! If you have high windows, add an extension handle to the squeegee. Do not purchase a cheap squeegee from the grocery store or you will not be pleased with the results. Miss Prisss recommends the Ettore brand.

Walls

Stop dipping a used rag into the same bucket of dirty water. Get two buckets. Fill one with water and general purpose cleaner. Let the other bucket empty. Dip sponge into water and wipe on walls, starting at the top and going back and forth. Squeeze out sponge in empty container. Dip in water again and wash wall. Always squeeze out the dirty water in the same container. That way the water with the general purpose cleaner will stay clean for the walls. Wipe wall with a dry terry towel, folded in quarters so that eight different sides can be used.

Dusting

Use a Lambswool duster for mini-blinds, windowsills, door frames and to remove cobwebs from room corners. Lambswool attracts dust much better than feather or cloth dusters because lambswool has a slightly electrical charge.

Vinyl Floors

Dust mop regularly with a treated dust mop. To clean, Miss Priss prefers to work on her hands and knees.

"You can see dirt that you could not see otherwise," she said. "Remember anything horizontal collects dirt so before you wash the floor, wash the baseboards."

Waxed floors are easier to keep clean, but if you have a build-up of old wax it should first be removed.

To strip old wax, apply mixture of one part ammonia to one-half part water. Apply liberally to about a 10-foot-square area. Let the solution set five to 10 minutes to dissolve old wax. The secret is to let the water and ammonia mixture do the work. After wax has loosened, scrub vigorously with a scrub brush. Squeegee the dirt into a plastic dustpan and dump into an empty bucket.

When stripped, rinse the floor with a mixture of 1 cup vinegar in the rinse water and then with plain water. Let the floor dry completely before waxing.

Apply a thin coat of floor wax; let dry completely and apply two more thin coats to traffic areas.

Damp mop using two buckets: one to apply the cleaning solution and another in which to dispose of the dirty water.

Bathrooms

Use a pumice stone to remove water rings in the commode. Clean commodes on a weekly basis with an acid toilet bowl cleaner, you will have little trouble with water rings.

Use spray bottle with disinfectant to clean washbowl, tub, shower, and tile. A cleaner that removes soap scum should be used and a cotton cloth used to buff the faucets.

Dirtiest spots in the house

The telephone and door knobs are the dirtiest spots in most houses, according to Miss Priss. Clean these on a weekly basis. Keep a constant lookout for fingerprints at door jams and wipe with a damp cloth.

Maintain

Miss Priss is alarmed by the waste that many families allow because they do not take proper care of items. She believes that one should buy the best they can afford and take care of it.

As an example of carlessness, Miss Priss said that too many couples buy an expensive sofa and then delay having their cat declawed, which quickly results in a ruined sofa.

"How differently would you care for an item if you knew that you could never replace it?" she asks.

She advises: read labels, don't be wasteful, give away items that are still in good repair but no longer in use. Maintain what you have.

She believes that homes are not cared for the way they were in former days because too many women's hearts are not in the home. She thinks this is a reflection of women not spending as much time at home.

Cleaning professionals

While, in some ways, this is a negative of society, it also provides an opportunity for many women to operate their own cleaning business. Miss Priss has these words of advice for those who clean for others: be efficient, have an eye for detail, be thorough, always do a little bit more than is expected, be completely trustworthy — if you break something, always be upfront and tell your client.

Miss Priss believes that a home that smells clean, looks cleaner. She prefers to use a bit of Pine Sol or lemon cleaner to impart that freshly clean aura.

People who clean for others should develop an eye for dirt, Miss Priss advises. She wears an apron with pockets when she cleans. She always carries a scissors so that she can snip threads hanging from upholstery. A grout brush or a toothbrush should be included to clean crevices that cannot be reached otherwise. A 100 percent cotton cloth is used to buff faucets and other surfaces because residue left behind collects more dust and dirt.

Miss Priss credits her cleaning expertise to Don Aslett, who holds national teaching seminars and has written several books on cleaning. Miss Priss offers an entertaining program based on Aslett's video, "Is there Life After Housework?" For more information, call Miss Priss at (717) 626-6802.

Proper cleaning supplies make Miss Priss's cleaning job easier and enjoyable. She often takes fresh flowers to her clients because those extra decorating touches makes a home appear more inviting.

Miss Priss uses a lamb's wool duster because lambswool has a slightly electrical charge that attracts dust and cobwebs.

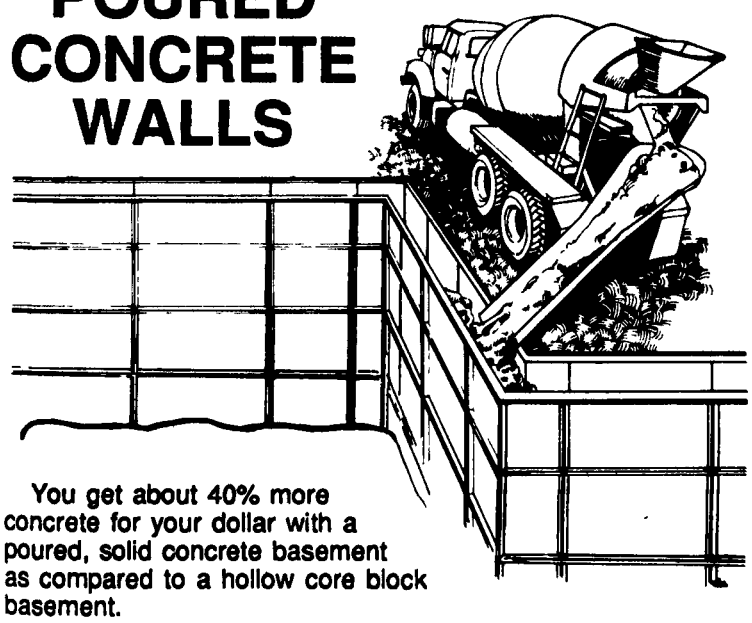
POURED SOLID CONCRETE

STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST!

POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ... there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

HAPPENINGS

TV FFA Members Earn Awards

Members of the Twin Valley FFA swept top honors in the recent Southeastern Pennsylvania Forestry contest as well as placing very well in several other contests.

Leading the Twin Valley winners was Ned Gardner, a Twin Valley senior, who won the forestry contest. Missy Tyson placed third in forestry, Megan MacBride fourth, Tara Plewa fifth, Chad Steffy ninth, and Jason Brooks twelfth.

Forestry contestants had to take a written test on knowledge of forestry, identify forestry tools, identify 20 different trees, measure tree diameter and the number of logs in trees, identify parts of a chain saw, and decide which trees to harvest and which to leave in an actual forest stand.

In the dairy foods contest, senior Ryan Marshall placed third, Michelle Powell fourth, Ramona Graziul fifteenth, and Harry Moore seventeenth. Dairy foods contestants also took written tests on dairy production and marketing, identified and graded defects in milk, identified cheeses, identified real or artificial dairy products, and performed California mastitis tests.

In the nursery landscape contest, Robert Sauder placed second. Jason Hess third, Gred Lund fifth, and Kira Davis seventh. These students also began with a written test, then had to identify landscaping trees and shrubs, and had to prune a shrub.

In the interview contest, Renee Baum placed third. Renee and other contestants wrote a letter applying for an agricultural job of their choice, completed a job application, and then was actually interviewed for the job she chose.

In livestock judging, Mike Reed placed sixteenth among all contestnats, but first of the Berks County students. In aquatic resources, Tom Lakeman placed sixteenth overall and fifth among the Berks County students. In small gas engines competition, Richard Wood placed fifth individually and Cheyney Arters placing seventeenth. The engines team placed seventh out of 16 teams.

Other Twin Valley contestants were Matt Kurtz, Natalie Beckwith, Jeff Doran, Rob Deeds, Henry Redmond, Mike Wilson, Beth Pecht, Michelle Steve, Brandy Ream and Nate Messner.

More than 300 students from Berks, Lebanon, Lancaster, and Schuylkill counties participated in the contests.

FFA Leadership for a growing planet

Twin Valley FFA

Thirty members of the Twin Valley FFA chapter entered their record books in the state FFA record book contest.

Twenty-five members received thirty-five medals for their records. Record books are judged on their completeness, accuracy, neatness, planning, summary, etc. A committee of agriculture teachers from across Pennsylvania does the actual judging of the records.

Topping the list of Twin Valley winners was Ryan Marshall, who received gold medals for his swine finishing, beekeeping, and non farm work records. Ryan also received the Farm Credit Award for the best records in Berks County. Ryan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Readinger of Reinholds.

Silver medals were awarded to Tifany King for her dog breeding records, Steve Harrop for his on-farm work records, Robert Sauder for his wildlife records, Heather Dougherty for her small animal records, Carla Kurtz for her work experience records, Ben Dodd for his aquaculture records, and Becky Kurtz for her small animal records.

Bronze medals were awarded to Amanda Scott for her small animal records: Andrew Mast for his dairy herd records; Andrew Parsons for his swine finishing and shop experience records; Ann Haag for her pet records; Brian McGowan for his field corn, swine finishing, on-farm work experience and shop experience records; Carla Kurtz for home improvement records; Chas Steffy for wildlife records; Ned Gardner for wildlife records; Heather Dougherty for swine finishing records; Jason Hess for wildlife records; Jason Mantz for on-farm work records; Marcie Baker for swine finishing and rabbit records; Matt Kurtz for on-farm work records; Missy Tyson for non farm work records; Michelle Jacobs for pet records; Michelle Powell for poultry records; Tara Plewa for wildlife records; and Tracey Putt for pleasure horse and non-farm work records.

All agriculture students at Twin Valley and at most other agriculture programs are required to maintain records on an animal, job, wildlife conservation project, research project, etc. In this way students learn the realities of record keeping. Record books are included as part of the grade for students. At the end of the year students summarize their records, do inventories, do net worth statements, and analyze their records to see where they could be improved.

In Berks County, FFA members then compete in a county record book contest, with monetary awards going to the top records in each category. Top records from the county contest are then entered in the state contest.

Record books are another way in which agricultural education students learn by doing. Classoom theory is put into practice with these student records.

Valuable Farm

110 Acres +/- Farm in Windsor Township, York County, Pa.

Attention Investors, Developers, Farmers

Here is a farm with outstanding potential. The land is mostly all clear and rolling with a view for miles. There is 20 acres or so surrounding the house & barns. The pasture has a stream. Very nice setting.

Road frontage galore. Approximatley 1673 feet on White Oak Rd. Approximately 880 feet on Craley Rd. and approximately 400 feet on Blacksmith Rd. Public sewer is along these roads on the South on a downhill grade. Public water is closeby on the West and Northwest. Other developments are popping up all around this property.

The farmstead has a 2 story frame home in good condition. The huge barns were used for beef cattle. There are 2 mobile homes on the property presently used as rental units. The valley with the farmstead would make a beautiful setting for a farmette.

If you are looking for a farm to farm this is a good one as there is very little unuseable land. The cropland is in good condition with good conservation practices.

Call for an appointment to see the boundaries.

Terms: 10% day of auction balance in 60 days. Balance of terms by Rob Lloyd of Stock & Leader - Attorney. Balance of terms day of auction.

AVIAN INFLUENZA AND SALMONELLA ENTERITIDIS: WHAT'S NEW?

Dr. Patty Dunn
Dept. of Veterinary Science

Avian disease detection and reduction programs, whether they exist at the regulatory, industry, or individual farm level, are constantly changing.

Changes are necessary in response to new circumstances, perceived risks, and evolving scientific information that impacts on testing and control of the disease. Recent modifications are soon to be enacted in two disease program areas that are of crucial importance to the Pennsylvania poultry industry: avian influenza and Salmonella enteritidis.

These programs are very different in scope and objectives. Avian influenza (AI) is of importance to all poultry species and is regulated by state and federal agencies. Highly pathogenic AI can result in disastrous morbidity in bird populations. For these reasons, eradication of this form of AI is the goal.

In contrast, Salmonella enteritidis (SE) can infect many avian and mammalian species, but very rarely causes clinical disease in mature poultry species. Salmonella enteritidis, as currently being addressed in Pennsylvania, is of primary concern in commercial egg flocks because of the potential for infected hens to periodically lay eggs that contain SE bacteria. If improperly handled or cooked, contaminated eggs used for human consumption can cause outbreaks of human salmonellosis. Because complete elimination of SE from all animal and bird populations and environments is impossible, the goal of SE control measures becomes reducing the risk to public health.

Voluntary enrollment of some Pennsylvania chickens flocks in the SE Pilot Project (USDA-VS) has helped to elucidate some of the epidemiologic data necessary to formulate a risk reduction plan.

The following is a brief look at the proposed recent changes in each program.

Avian Influenza

During the last five months, tens of thousands of samples from Pennsylvania birds and premises have been tested for AI virus or antibody. Very few positives, indicating the presence of H5N2 AI virus, have been found, and most were limited to the live bird markets or poultry dealer conveyances or premises. Despite extensive testing, no live H5N2 AI virus has been found in commercial poultry flocks in Pennsylvania during this period.

For these reasons, modifications to the present restrictions on Pennsylvania flocks are being formulated and will go into effect on or about June 1, 1993. The modifications are the result of recommendations of state and federal animal health officials and avian disease specialists representing Pennsylvania and surrounding states who convened at the Northeast regional meeting of the American Association of Veterinary Laboratory Diagnosticians and the U.S. Animal Health Association at Saratoga Springs, N.Y. on May 18 and 19.

The modifications will include a lessening of restrictions on the movement of all poultry. In most instances, this will allow free movement of poultry throughout the state. The current premovement test requirements on live birds would be suspended. At the same time, sampling of gathering points including live bird markets, auctions, and exhibitions as well as conveyances (trucks, vans, and crates) will intensify for a time.

Serologically positive flocks now under quarantine may have another option (other than depopulation) to qualify for release from quarantine. This will probably involve swabbing of birds and premises for AI virus at prescribed intervals as well as placement of sentinel birds.

The cooperative Pennsylvania AI surveillance program as currently in place will continue to operate. Routine, regular submissions of blood or eggs will be tested for antibody at the laboratories in the Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory system. These laboratory services are free of charge to the producer.

In addition, birds submitted to the laboratories for diagnostic evaluation will routinely be tested for antibody to AI. Any questions regarding the application of these changes should be directed to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Animal Industry, (717) 783-5222.

Salmonella Enteritidis

Learning from the related experiences and research of others is an important part of formulating new programs for disease control and risk reduction.

On May 19, scientists, veterinarians, and technologists working directly with the SE Pilot Project (USDA-VS) in Pennsylvania had an opportunity to exchange findings, ideas, and philosophies with Dr. Tom Humphrey of the United Kingdom at an informal meeting at the University of Pennsylvania, New Bolton Center.

Humphrey is a scientist at the Food Laboratory of the Public Health Laboratory at Exeter. The United Kingdom has recently had extensive experience with monitoring chicken flocks for SE. A particularly virulent strain known as phage type 4 appeared in poultry and eggs in the last 1980s, resulting in many human food-borne illnesses and deaths. Fortunately, this dangerous strain of SE is not present in the U.S.

Similarities were noted between the northeast U.S. and the United Kingdom in the actual rate of SE-contaminated eggs as well as the current difficulties in predicting flocks at high risk for shedding SE into the egg. Some important differences in the experiences of the U.K. compared to the U.S. are:

- The human salmonellosis outbreak and death rates are much higher in the U.K.
- Most human outbreaks in the U.K. are related to the consumption of single-service eggs or egg-containing foods prepared in family homes. In the U.S., most outbreaks associated with eggs are in institutional or restaurant settings where eggs or egg-containing foods are batch-prepared.
- Poultry house rodents do not appear to be as important to the maintenance and spread of SE in the U.K. poultry flocks as they are in the U.S.

The United Kingdom is concentrating most of its control efforts in two major areas: 1) maintaining all breeder flocks free of SE and 2) educating consumers in the storage and preparation of eggs and egg products.

Additional risk-reduction measures in U.K. poultry flocks include the use of competitive exclusion flora (broilers only), lowered stocking densities, acid treatment of poultry feed, and testing of environments, eggs, and birds for SE to identify high risk flocks.

Humphrey also described his research that showed that SE organisms, if present in a newly laid egg, are in very low numbers and found exclusively on the outside of the egg yolk membranes or in the albumen close to the yolk. Factors in the albumen that deter bacterial growth keep the numbers low. However, as the egg ages to 3 to 4 weeks, the yolk membrane breaks down and the SE has access to the yolk material, which is an excellent medium for bacterial growth. At this time, SE numbers increase dramatically, and the egg becomes highly contaminated. The time needed for the breakdown of the yolk membrane can be greatly increased if eggs are kept at refrigerator temperatures. Therefore, in addition to adequate cooking, an effective way to reduce the risk of consuming highly contaminated eggs is to purchase fresh eggs and keep them refrigerated until use.

Discussion also centered on information to help formulate plans for the "Second Tier Project," which is a proposed voluntary poultry industry driven quality assurance program in Pennsylvania by which many Pennsylvania flocks can be routinely monitored for SE or SE risk factors. Set guidelines for rodent control, cleaning and disinfecting, and disposition of eggs are being discussed.

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation has requested that USDA provide some administrative support for such a program. The particulars of sampling, testing, and administration will be worked out by committees comprised of industry volunteers, with input as needed from SE Pilot Project veterinarians and university scientists and veterinarians. Farm-based testing may be appropriate in some cases.

New laboratory procedures for testing eggs and identification of high risk flocks are being evaluated as ways to decrease labor requirements and turnaround time associated with traditional bacteriologic culture of samples for SE. It is hoped that the program will take shape and be implemented within the next few months, and will probably run simultaneously with the SE Pilot Project for a designated period of time.

The "heart" of any field cultivator is the shank pivot point. A "bulked up" shank bracket made of cast ductile iron instead of the usual formed steel bracket, incorporated a hardened steel bushing AND a zerk grease fitting to lubricate the pivot point to reduce wear. The result is thousands of acres of extended life of the shanks.

THE NEWEST WONDER DRUG?

Recent research has shown the advantages of supplementing feedlot diets with vitamin E to reduce sickness, improve immunity, and extend the shelf life of beef at the retail level. The most important and consistent results probably relate to the extended shelf life of beef products.

In general, beef cuts become cherry red in color as a result of exposure to oxygen in the air. The compound responsible for this effect is called oxymyoglobin. Over time, this compound becomes oxidized to form metmyoglobin, resulting in a darkening and browning of the beef on the surface.

The problem for retailers, and the beef industry, is the beef that turns dark must be discounted in price to be sold. Secondly, exports of beef to places like Japan are restricted by the shorter shelf life of beef from the U.S. compared to grass-fed beef from other places such as Australia.

Vitamin E acts as an antioxidant and slows the conversion of oxymyoglobin to metmyoglobin, thus extending the time the beef retains the red color. Grazing cattle normally eat 1,000-4,000 IU of vitamin E daily, so beef from grass-fed cattle would generally have a longer shelf life.

Research at the University of Wisconsin and other places has shown that feedlot cattle consuming from 500 to 2,000 IU of supplemental vitamin E will produce carcasses with cuts with a significantly longer shelf life. In one study, price discounts from discoloration averaged about 5.6 percent for untreated cattle and about 2 percent from those consuming additional vitamin E.

Unlike some other common vitamins, vitamin E is not particularly cheap. Researcher Dan Scheafer at Wisconsin has estimated it will cost about $3 per steer for 500 IU daily of vitamin E for the last 100 days before slaughter.

Somebody will have to pay for this added cost that may or may not effect production efficiency. The easy answer would be the packer will pay for it since the increased carcass value will be the most important effect. For exported products, this would seem logical. However, for domestic sales, the extended shelf life could be a break-even at best.

When retailers have the option of longer marketability without discounts, less beef could conceivably be required under the assumption that the discounted product is sold to consumers who would not buy the product otherwise. Since the discounted value of discolored beef is already factored into the retail price, less discolored product could result in the break-even situation.

Cattle feeders could be paid for this practice if packers would had some confidence the cattle were actually fed the supplemental vitamin E, and they could pass this added cost to distributors and retailers. Those in the export business would logically accept this. Domestic suppliers may not.

Another factor to be considered is public perception. The addition of supplemental vitamin E to feedlot diets is estimated to be worth more than $600 million to the industry through additional beef sales. That fact may be secondary to how the consumer perceives the use of these products in food.

Today's consumer is educated by the evening news about their food, so they often get a distorted picture of food safety. While the concept of "extra vitamins" may be more palatable to consumers than "hormone implants," you just never know.

Visit with your feed dealer and your cattle buyer about the concept of supplemental vitamin E in your diets. At this point, be sure there is some confidence you will be paid for your trouble.

Refunds Total $108,378.82

LIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — Chester County dairy farmers who reduced their 1992 milk marketings received refunds totaling $108,378.82, according to Hollis D. Baker, county executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

The cash payments went to 95 milk producers in the county under the Dairy Refund Payment Program (DRPP), authorized by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

"Any producer who provided evidence that he did not market more milk in 1992 than in 1991 was eligible to receive the entire amount deducted from his milk proceeds if he or she met the eligibility requirements and claimed the refund by March 15," Baker said.

She said Chester County producers filed 95 applications and claimed refunds of $108,378.82 based upon reduced milk marketings of 63,607 hundredweight.

The 1990 Act provides that the 11.25 cents per hundredweight milk marketing assessment will be increased on May-December milk marketings each year to compensate for refunds made for the previous year. Therefore, effective May 1, the assessment was increased by 5.1 cents for a total of 16.35 cents per hundredweight.

"This rate will remain in effect throughout the remainder of this year," said the ASCS official, "and will revert to 11.25 cents per hundredweight on January 1, 1994."

FAIR DAYS

Kempton Country Fair

Momentum is gaining at the Kempton Community Center where plans are being completed for the 39th annual Kempton Country Fair to be held Friday through Sunday, June 18 to 20.

With two modified stock classes added to the Friday night tractor and stock pick-up pulls and a children's pedal tractor pull scheduled for Sunday, something new has been added to this year's roster. This season marks 30 years of tractor pulls at the fair.

The generous gift of scholarship funds has added to the number of contestants vying for the title of Es Lieblichst Maedel, the fairest one, who will reign as Miss Kempton Fair for 1993. The competition will be narrowed prior to the fair weekend; however, as in the past, the queen will be selected in a series of events including talent, evening costume and an on-stage interview.

The schedule has been posted for most events, volunteers are being garnered, the musical talent has been signed, other events including exhibition booths and stands are under way, and the fair will go on rain or shine the entire Father's Day weekend.

Admission for 1993 is $3 per person which includes controlled parking. Children under 12 are admitted free.

Farmers Should Check Conservation Needs

LIONVILLE (Chester Co.) — "Producers who have serious soil erosion, water quality, or pollution problems on their land may want to review the list of Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) practices available at our office," said Hollis D. Baker, county executive director of the Chester/Delaware County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

Baker said ACP funds are available to solve these and other conservation problems through annual and long-term conservation agreements.

With winter practices completed, producers may want to begin spring practices or consider applying necessary conservation practices during the coming season, said the ASCS official. Producers must apply prior to beginning the work.

Cost-share funds are available for practices such as waterways, diversions, terraces, stripcropping, no-till and minimum till, and others.

The program offers financial and technical assistance to help producers solve critical soil, water, and pollution problems on their land.

Brillion Offers Warranty On Field Cultivator C-Shanks

BRILLION, Wis. — In response to today's intense residue management practices, Brillion Iron Works, Inc., introduces a durable c-shank assembly that handles tough residue without breaking. The assembly found on Brillion's HFC field cultivators carries a four-year warranty.

The 'heart' of any field cultivator is the shank pivot point," said Michael Irish, Brillion's national sales manager. "As farmers began leaving more residue on the surface, we saw a need for a stronger, more durable shank assembly. That's why Brillion casts its shank brackets in ductile iron instead of forming them in steel like other manufacturers. We also incorporated a hardened steel bushing and a grease-zerk fitting to lubricate the pivot point and reduce wear."

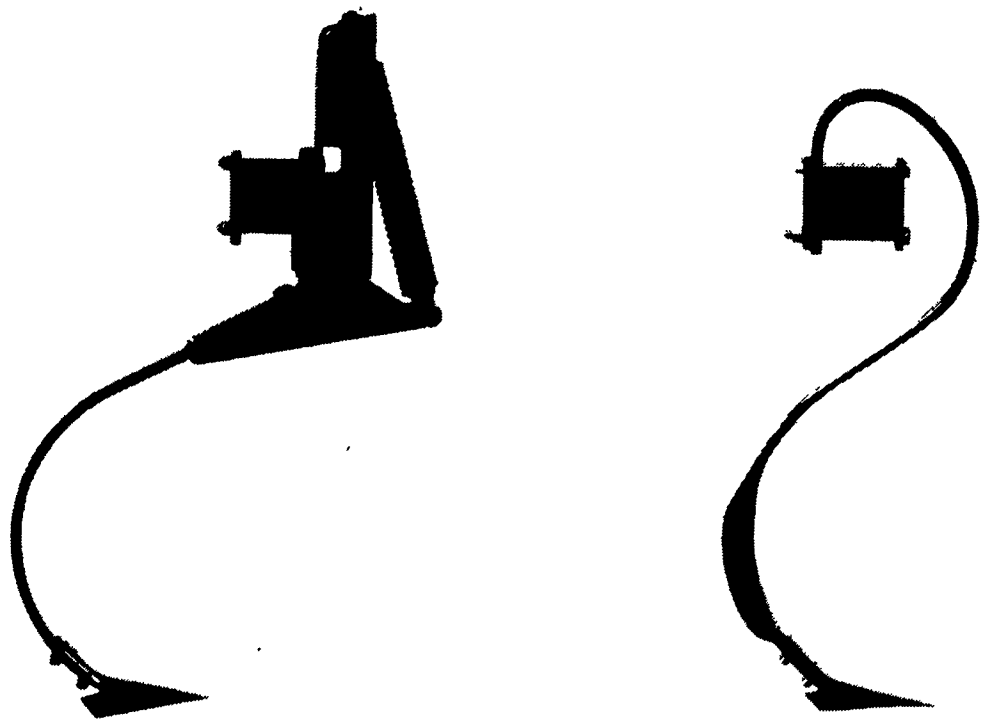
Irish says the enhanced manufacturing of the assembly has greatly extended the life of the shanks, allowing Brillion to offer a four-year warranty.

The strong, durable shank assembly is complimented with 142 pounds of pressure on the point to keep the shank in the ground for maximum, uniform tillage. A shank clearance of 26 inches from the bottom of the frame to the sweep tip handles maximum trash conditions with ease. The shank trip height is 13-1/4 inches. The lengthened frame with 32-inch spacing between shank bars also promotes free trash flow.

"The HFC Field Cultivator can also be fitted with s-tines that offer a three-year limited warranty," said Irish. "The leading edge on Brillion's s-tines is twisted 90 degrees to minimize trash build-up around the tine and to prevent throwing residue and soil. The new s-tine is durably built to withstand rigorous field conditions for long wear and quality performance."

Since 1985, Brillion has manufactured primary and secondary tillage tools. Their quality-crafted farm implements include chisel plows, row crop cultivators, deep tills, flail shredders, harrows, pulverizers, pulvimulchers, seeders, soil builders, soil groomers and drags.

For more information, contact your local Brillion dealer, or write Brillion Iron Works, Inc., Brillion, WI 54110, (414) 756-2121.



BRILLION "C" SHANK — BRILLION "S" TINE

Brillion Iron Works, Inc., introduces a durable c-shank assembly that handles tough residue without breaking. The assembly found on Brillion's HFC field cultivators carries a four-year warranty.

Crop Certifications Due

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — On April 30, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service closed the 1993 farm program sign-up period. Producers who enrolled in the wheat, feed grains should now prepare to certify their program acres.

Schuylkill County farmers have until June 15 to report the acreage and intended uses of their wheat, oats, barley, rye and other small grains and July 15 to report the acreage and intended uses of their corn, grain sorghum, soybeans to the ASCS office. The reports are used to establish crop history which is the foundation for participation in USDA programs.

Prior to reporting the acreage, farmers can request that ASCS measure their program acres. The measurements are furnished at cost, and guaranteed for the crop year. Measurement service is not only valuable to farm program participants, but to any producer who desires an accurate acreage for any reason.

Farm program participants are required to correctly certify their entire farm after planting to be eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments, and other benefits. The reports contain crops and acreage planted, the uses to be made of these crops, acreage removed from crop production to the acreage conservation reserve, and conservation use acres for payment.

All farmers who have not certified their spring and fall-seeded small grains are urged to do so before the June 15 deadline.

Kelly Ragazinsky, program assistant, said that photo prints were mailed to farm operators to use in recording planted acreages. Completing the prints prior to visiting our office can save you time.

If you have not received prints, call the office at (717) 429-1168 and copies will be forwarded.

HIGH TENSILE FENCE...THE FARMER'S BEST INVESTMENT

The Beaver Fence Systems are tops! We installed 1 mile of their fence on our farm on Feb. 3, 1993, full size post, 3-1/2 feet deep, excellent braces. We used 5 strand (2 elec.) high tensil, all in place in just 8-1/2 hours! The fence is as straight as an arrow-excellent equipment-very efficient work!

"I am a hard man to convince, but after I saw how Beaver built the fence, I'm ready to put my digging iron away," says David W. Brubaker of Honey Grove Acres, RD1, Box 629 Honey Grove, PA 17035

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds
BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.
MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.
ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Rebuild Equipment With Replacement Engine

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Engine breakdowns always seem to happen at the busiest time of the year. Although a complete overhaul may work in some cases, a replacement engine may be a more sensible approach.

"For many agricultural equipment owners, facing the probability of downtime during the busy season due to engine failure means pushing the panic button," said Harvey Gagnon, parts analyst, BSD Engines, Ford New Holland. "While being out of the field is bad enough, not knowing exactly what the problem might be, how much repairs will cost, or when the machine will be rolling again often creates a stressful, frustrating situation.

"Farmers should consider several factors when faced with the question of whether to rebuild or go with a replacement engine," said Gagnon. "Besides cost, the amount of downtime, risk factor of mixing old parts with new ones, possibility of future breakdowns, and limited warranty must all weigh on the decision."

If a farmer starts to see his "old work horse" is consuming more oil than normal or blowing excess smoke out the breather pipe, a compression check is recommended. This simple test will show if major repairs are needed.

Determining exactly what is causing low compression involves tearing everything down and examining all pieces for wear and tear. The repair effort then may involve installing numerous new parts. If the block needs to be rebored or the crankshaft needs regrinding, the servicing dealer usually must find an outside labor source to complete this precise work. This extra step can keep the machine out of service even longer.

Rebuilding can also involve lengthy negotiations and may bring unanswered questions, such as how long will the job take, how good is the work, and what is the total cost? As time drags on, the relationship between customers and dealers may become increasingly strained.

"To avoid numerous pitfalls associated with an overhaul job, a farmer needs to consider the advantages of putting in a brand new replacement engine," said Gagnon. "In most cases, purchasing a new factory diesel is comparable to the total expense of a complete overhaul.

"Using one of our BSD (Basildon Series Diesel) engines as an example, when you include a figure representing downtime before the rebuilt engine is back in the field, the purchase cost of a BSD engine is usually only 5-10 percent above the cost of an overhaul," he said.

Durability and improved technology are other solid reasons for purchasing a replacement engine. All engines feature the latest design components, are hot tested and run up to power before leaving the assembly line.

"Warranty is another budget parameter that can influence your decision. With our new Ford New Holland BSD Engine, there's a one-year warranty. However, an overhaul is usually limited to just 90 days."

Gagnon also points out that manufacturers such as Ford New Holland generally have replacement engines available which can be shipped immediately to local equipment dealers. They can then install a factory-fresh engine in a lot less time than it takes to overhaul one.

Manufacturers carry a variety of replacement engines. For example, Ford New Holland carries replacements for nearly every tractor model dating to 1965, Gagnon adds. Not all manufacturers can match this service.

"So the next time your tractor is hard to start, lacks power, or shows signs of oil consumption, pull it in for a compression check," said Gagnon. "By taking time for a thorough engine examination and a detailed discussion with your dealer, you'll be able to determine if an engine transplant might be your most cost-effective alternative."

A factory-fresh replacement engine can be installed in a lot less time than it takes to overhaul one.

PREVENT PIGLET CRUSHING

MODEL 90
FARROWING CRATE

Constructed from heavy gauge materials this crate is designed to reduce crushing, with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars makes for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminates the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as she lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within FIVE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge. This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next five years.

WD-40 Searches For Most Unusual Uses

(NAPS) — Although WD-40 has its roots in the aerospace industry, some claim it has achieved "cult" status as a consumer product. The cult status comes from all the unusual stories people come up with about WD-40. The WD-40 Company is now trying to track down these odd stories and uses for the product.

Now celebrating its 40th birthday, WD-40 was originally created to prevent corrosion on the Atlas missile. Now, people all around the world claim it "cures" arthritis.

Fishing enthusiasts report that WD-40, when sprayed on bait, acts as a fish attractant, allowing them to out-fish their friends. Pet owners claim it cures mange on animals. Homeowners spray their garbage cans with it to keep bugs and animals out.

Although the WD-40 Company does not endorse or encourage these uses, the list goes on and on.

In addition to these unusual uses, consumers also write the company with strange and compelling stories involving the product.

Numerous letters from Vietnam vets recount how WD-40 saved lives during the war by keeping M-14 and M-15 weapons rust-free and ready for combat.

A nude burglary suspect who wedged himself into a vent at a cafe in Denver, was extracted by the fire department with a large dose of WD-40.

A California woman recently wrote to the company that her parakeet had accidently adhered itself to sticky mouse-trap paper. When she tried to free the stuck bird, her hands became stuck. A neighbor drove them both to the vet, where they were promptly released by a spray of WD-40.

In honor of its 40th Anniversary, WD-40 Company is looking for strange and unusual uses and stories involving WD-40, and old WD-40/Rocket Chemical cans and memorabilia. The first 10 consumers to send the company an old Rocket Chemical can will be eligible to receive $100. The first 200 to write the company about an unusual or quirky WD-40 use will be eligible to receive a commemorative 40th birthday T-shirt.

Interested consumers can write to WD-40's Most Unusual Uses, 6863 Friars Road, San Diego, CA 92108.

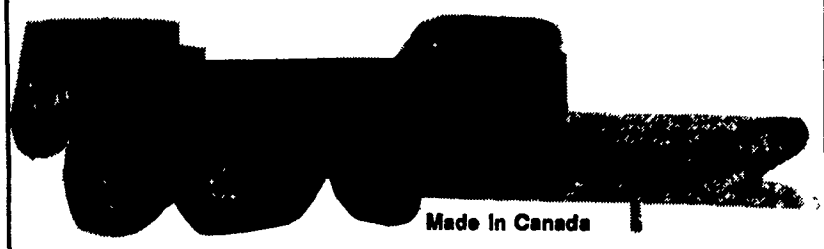
HYDRA-SPREAD

HYDRAULIC PUSH-GATE MANURE SPREADER



The simple and proven design of Hydra-Spread uses reliable hydraulic power to push the load. This feature eliminates troublesome apron chains, gearbox, shafts, and sprockets and replaces them with a simple, dependable, hydraulic cylinder assembly. Sides and floor of the Hydra-Spread are made from super-slippery, corrosion-proof, high density polyethylene. The rugged efficient beater design delivers a fine uniform spread pattern. The all-welded unit frame features heavy structural sections for long life.

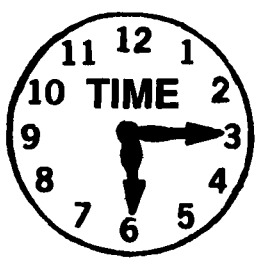
THE CROP IS YOUR $ CASH $

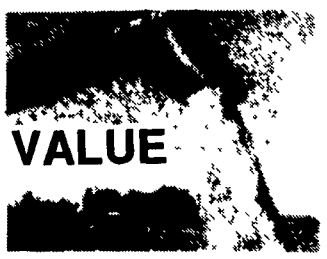
Everything you work for — tilling ground, planting seed, spraying or cultivating — depends upon Harvesting your CROP and getting it sold!

NOTHING HARVESTS CROPS LIKE A case IH Axial-Flow Combine!

HERE'S 4 REASONS WHY!



- Get in the field earlier - and stay later - because the Axial Flow Combine's specialty rotor separates grain from wet, damp material better than the competition. You get more done in less days than with a conventional combine.



- Grain from an Axial Flow combine is worth more, because it is less damaged and the sample is cleaner than from a conventional combine. (Food Corn growers PREFER Axial Flow for this reason.)

MAINTENANCE

- The single rotor design eliminates the straw walker assembly and all the problems that go with all those bearings and vibration. All of the threshing and separating system parts are easy to get to, making maintenance a simple routine.

HOOBER SERVICE

- Don Carper and his (5) combine technicians work on combines 12 months of the year. They have started over 250 Axial Flow combines in all kinds of crops and conditions. Their knowledge and concern for your problems keep you running when you want to run.

Enhanced performance and durability make these drills the benchmark in end-wheel drill design

Uncompromising performance and durability, make the 450 Drill one of today's most popular seeding tools.

Down-pressure is a key factor in obtaining more penetration for consistent seed depth with end-wheel drills. And the 450 Drill provides superior down-pressure—up to 124 pounds per opener—to help you slice through residue and tough soils for more accurate seeding depth.

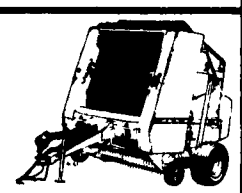
WHY ARE THESE THE FASTEST MOVING BALERS AROUND?



It's simple. You get uniform bale density throughout the bale — density you need for solid, stand-up-tall bales. Bales that hold their shape and, therefore, perserve hay quality.

If your bales stay round, they shed water better. And since John Deere bales won't flatten or "slouch", there is less bale surface touching the ground to wick-up moisture. Dramatically reducing spoilage.

Kuhn's FC series of Mower Conditioners — faster cutting, faster drying, better hay.

Kuhn applied over 160 years of research to build a mower/conditioner that cuts quicker (7-9 m.p.h. — 6-7½ acres/hour) and requires less dry down than many other systems on the market. And Kuhn's FC series is easy on your crop. With a choice of finger comb or roller conditioning, you can match your crop type for even and gentle conditioning with less nutrient loss.

Farmers everywhere in the world compare all other disc mowers to Kuhn. The GMD series of Multidisc Mowers features oval shaped discs to get through crops without plugging. GYROSTAR GRS25N COMBINATION RAKE/TEDDER

The efficiency and effectiveness of both rake and tedder, two unique machnines combined in one frame.

• GRS25N Rake Tedder
EXCEPTIONAL VALUE $4,290

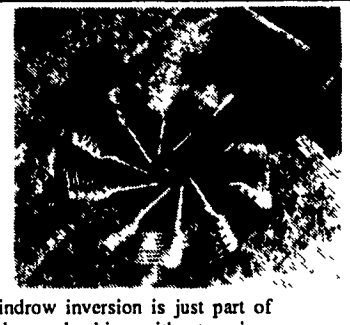
Kuhn's Gyrorake turns haymaking upside down with the 3-in-1 rake, windrow inverter and tedder.



Windrow inversion is an essential process that not only allows hay to dry faster, but also decreases leaf loss as it increases nutrient levels. Get the job done fast with a Kuhn Gyrorake. It lets you match rotor and ground speeds to your crop conditions for gentle, efficient inverting.

But when it comes to Kuhn Gyrorakes, windrow inversion is just part of the story. The GA series offers gentle, high speed raking without roping. Side delivery enables you to double windrow. And if needed, the Gyrorake also is an effective tedder for fluffing and drying hay.

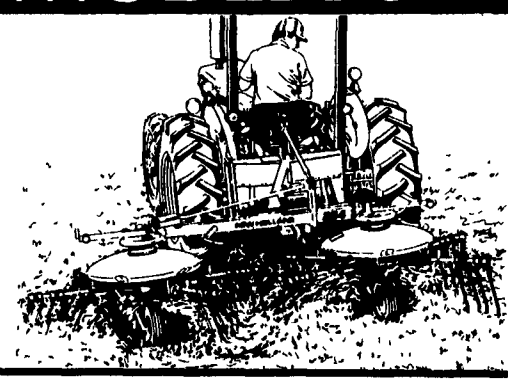
MODEL 254



THE TEDDER THAT RAKES

Now, you can rake and ted with the same machine — the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder. The Model 254 lets you perform a variety of hay-making functions... rake a swath into a windrow, rake two windrows into one, turn windrows, and move crop away from treelines and fences. And, without tools you can convert the Model 254 into a tedder that will fluff up wet, matted-down crop for quick drying.

Stop in today. Let us show you the flexibility of the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder...only from Ford New Holland.

MAHONING MANUFACTURING

Mahoning Outdoor Furnace Co.
R.R. Box 210. Rochester Mills. PA 15771 (412) 286-9959

Get Comforting Heat and Efficiency.

The Mahoning Outdoor Multi-Fuel Furnaces provide thermostat controlled heat by economically burning wood, coal or fuel oil. The furnace is placed 25-100 feet outside the structure to be heated; connections between the furnace and building are buried underground. Wood or coal is the primary burning fuel lasting 8-12 hours in the furnace. For convenient, automatic firing the separate oil burner combustion chamber can provide heat until wood or coal burning is desired. Both Wood/Coal & the Fuel Oil burners are enclosed to heat the same water tank. The purpose of the firebox is to heat the water-filled tank surrounding the outside unit, this heated water is then circulated through underground pipes into your home. A heating coil is installed inside your existing heat system. The thermostat controls the blower which picks the heat off the coils and delivers warm air through existing ducts and registers. There are safeties which eliminate the danger of over-pressurizing the system and automatic shutdown in case of a power failure. The Mahoning Outdoor Furnace can also be connected to an existing hydronic heating system, that operates at 160° F or less, using fin tube baseboard, cast iron radiators or hanging hydronic heaters. Only the thermostat and heating coils are installed inside your home, eliminating open fire dangers, smoke, dust and messy kindling wood boxes. Adjust the thermostat for the Mahoning Outdoor Furnace to your comfort setting and it automatically controls the water pump and blower to circulate heat to your home. You may set the thermostat for your existing heat system to back-up the Mahoning Outdoor Furnace when not in operation or in case the firebox is left to burn out. An Aquastat senses the temperature of the water in the outside unit and automatically adjusts the combustion rate to maintain the correct temperature (normally 180 degrees)

Hot Water too...!

A Mahoning Outdoor Furnace is a heat exchanger. By running a cold water line from your home to the outside unit, fresh household cold water can be heated and returned to the hot water plumbing in the house. A temporing valve adjusts the hot water at the faucets to a range of 120° to 160°. This boiler system will adapt to any existing plumbing. Heat your pool & hot tub with energy generated by a Mahoning Outdoor Furnace!

DEMONSTRATIONS: Claas, Rollant Baler, Claas Quadrant Big Square Baler, Kverneland Wrapper

SEMINAR: Reps from Germany will be on hand to discuss and demonstrate silage & haylage practices in Europe.

New Vicon GMR Mower Conditioners are even better than before. For high capacity performance, nothing else can make this cut.

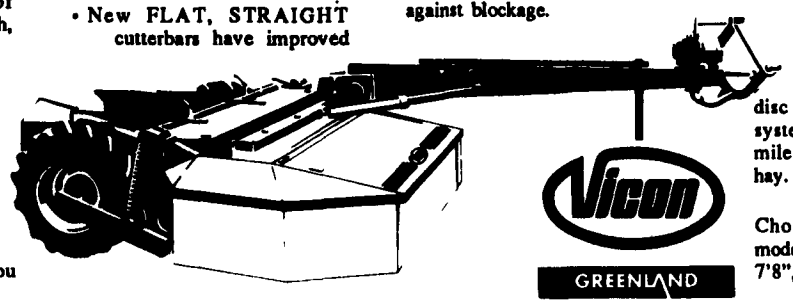
Now, with introduction of new GMR series, field performance has reached new levels of efficiency, with more strength, more stability and even better cutting and conditioning than before.

Vicon engineers listened

• Mainframes are stronger, with less weight. Completely redesigned with a lower profile and welded side panels to deliver the endurance and stability you need to keep harvesting on schedule.

• New FLAT, STRAIGHT cutterbars have improved bearings and single, one piece skids to protect the full cutterbar length.

• Conditioning rolls are set in low behind the cutterbar at a 25 degree angle to streamline crop flow, leaving high, fluffy swaths for fast curing and drying. A new V-belt drive protects the rollers against blockage.



• Noise levels have been drastically reduced with a redesigned front gearbox and mounting for quieter operation.

You can still cut square corners on the move with the new full swivel ball hitch engineered for maximum maneuverability. Plus there's a new computer designed mechanical suspension system that smooths the ride in the roughest conditions.

These machines are simple to operate with an advanced 3-bladed disc cutting and conditioning system that turns acres into miles of curing, nutrient-rich hay.

Choose from three reliable models with working widths of 7'8", 9'2" and 10'6".

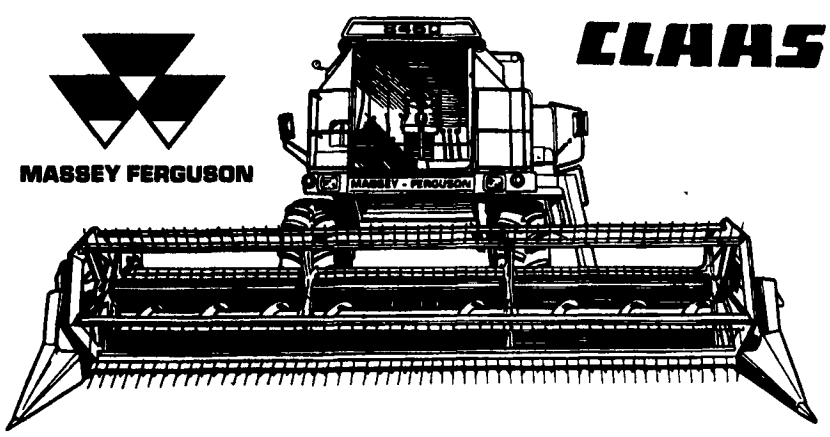
MASSEY FERGUSON

CLAAS



MASSEY FERGUSON and CLAAS teamwork means:
- The best ideas and technology from all over the world.
- The manufacturing might of the wrold's largest combine manufacturer.
- The sales and service support that makes MF the world's best selling brand of tractors.
- And the long-term commitment of two world-class companies.

MASSEY FERGUSON and CLAAS enjoy a richer heritage of accomplishments and successes than any other farm equipment company.

For nearly thirty years, more farmers, worldwide, have chosen MF tractors that any other brand by a wide margin. The reasons for this immense popularity start with outstanding products, of course. But they also include outstanding product service and support.

The MASSEY FERGUSON organization also understands the unique needs of North America farmers. Regional MF Business Units put product and marketing decisions closer to its customers, and make MASSEY FERGUSON more responsive to customers' needs.

Across the ocean in Germany, CLAAS is the world's undisputed leader in the design and production of combines and other harvesting equipment. Its manufacturing plants are modern and efficient, incorporating the latest in technology. Its labor force is well organized and highly skilled. As a result, CLAAS products are setting new standards for consistent quality control and reliability.

MASSEY FERGUSON developed the world's very first, commercially available, self-propelled combine in 1938.

Since then it has built more than 150,000 combines for U.S. and Canadian farmers. This makes MF a leading combine producer in North America.

During this time MASSEY FERGUSON has earned the respect and preference of the most demanding users. The widely popular MF 800 Series combines, for example, are still in high demand and command top dollar on the used combine market.

CLAAS of Germany, meanwhile, is the undisputed combine leader in Europe and many other parts of the world. It has produced more than 350,000 combines for use all over the world.

As a result, CLAAS combines have been perfected to harvest an amazing range of crops under the most severe conditions imaginable. This global diversity has resulted in combines that are unsurpassed for threshing ability and reliability.

Thanks to truly global operations, CLAAS is able to gather practical field experience twelve months a year. This dramatically shortens the time it takes to bring a first concept through to finished new product.

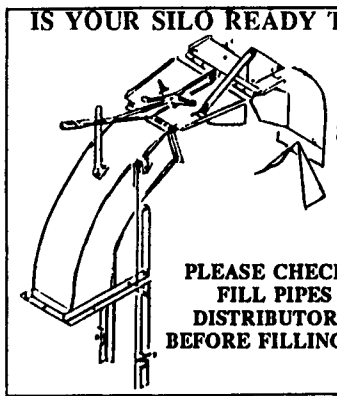
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete
STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

CONCRETE REASONS WHY A NEW POURED CONCRETE SILO IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT...

NO USED SILOS!
NO REBUILT SILOS!
NO PREOWNED SILOS!
"ALL NEW FOR YOU!!"

A. Enhancement of cash flow. Improved forage quality results in consistent, and increased milk production.

B. "Safe Silo" Our silos meet or exceed industry standards, reducing/protecting lender liability.

C. Initial Cost. Used or cheap pre-fab silos may have a lower initial cost, but based upon useful life, the new poured concrete silo will have a lower annual cost: due to longer life and lower maintenance costs.

D. Residual Value. Our new, poured concrete silos are built for "generations of use", and enhance the future value of the farm.

E. Storage Losses Reduced. Poured concrete silos consistently out-perform all other methods of storing and preserving the total digestible nutrients in forage crops.

F. Protecting Forage Quality. Oxygen and heat cause the most damage to stored silage and haylage. Our poured concrete silos are the very best system to PROTECT YOUR FORAGE QUALITY... "NOBODY PROTECTS FORAGE QUALITY LIKE WE DO...NOBODY"
